Knox to Cancel Navy Oil Deal; Contract Is Called Illegal

Standard Oil Had Received Sole Right To Fuel Field

Contract Entitles Corporation to Draw 27½ Million Barrels From Navy Reserve

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Prompt steps to "terminate" the Navy Department's contract with the Standard Oil Co. of California for exclusive operation of the Elk Hills naval oil reserve—second richest petroleum field in the world—were promised last night by Secretary Frank Knox.

Announcement of the Secretary's decision came quickly after Assistant Attorney General Norman M. Littell pronounced "illegal and invalid" the contract which President Roosevelt approved last November 18 and which Knox signed two days later.

Under the contract, now nearly seven months old, and which has been under attack in congressional committees and, openly, on the floors of House and Senate for weeks, Standard Oil would have been allowed to withdraw about 27,500,000 barrels of oil of which 64 per cent belongs to the Navy and for which no payment would have been required for five years.

Operations Begun

The company began operations under its contract shortly after it was signed, although Rear Admiral H. A. Stuart, director of naval petroleum reserves, conceded to a House Appropriations Subcommittee last February 11 that the agreement could not be considered consummated until Congress appropriated $2,900,000 sought by the Navy Department to put its terms into effect.

The subcommittee which on two occasions refused to recommend the expenditure, was told at the same time that Standard Oil was pumping petroleum from the reserve at the rate of 12,500 barrels a day.

Gift Relief Abroad Urged by Lehman

Outright gifts of relief supplies to liberated nations were urged yesterday by Herbert H. Lehman, head of the Office of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation, lest the credit of such nations for reconstruction loans be impaired by their inability to repay the relief loans.

Lehman insisted that Americans cannot live with security in a world "half rich, half pauperized."

'44 Tax Goal Cut to Half Of War Cost

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau yesterday fixed the Administration's annual revenue goal at 50 billion dollars, 12 billion more than present taxes are slated to bring, to pay half the current cost of the war.

His restatement of revenue goals disclosed that the Treasury had finally abandoned the 16-billion-dollar increase figure used since the first of the year, in favor of a 12 billion dollar figure. The reason for this, it was made clear, was that four billion more than had been expected when the year began is coming in through present revenue laws, including the new pay-as-you-go legislation.

Experts Busy On Program

Also abandoned, it was indicated, was any thought that the increased revenue goal could all be obtained during the next fiscal year, since half of the fiscal year will be gone by January 1, when any new individual and corporation taxes that Congress may write will become effective.

Meanwhile, the House Ways and Means Committee failed to agree on the time to begin consideration of the new tax bill, although Morgenthau told reporters his tax experts were already working with the Joint Congressional Tax Committee on recommendations for new levies.

Secretary Morgenthau told his press conference that he agreed with the statement of congressional

Heat-Easing Storm Brings Property Loss

Lions' Carnival Tents Leveled; 2 Boys Drown; Several Prostrated

A violent storm, accompanied by lightning and wind that reached a velocity of 55 miles an hour, struck Washington last night; bringing relief to a sweltering day in which two boys were drowned and several others prostrated.

The storm broke at 9:52 p. m. and within a few minutes the mercury had dropped 10 degrees to 75. Scores of trees, poles and live wires were blown down throughout the metropolitan area. Seven tents were smashed to the ground at the Lions Club Carnival, Georgia Avenue and District Line, and caused damage estimated at more than $1000. No one was injured, however, at the carnival.

Circus Cut Short

The wind also ripped a small hole in the big tent of the Ringling Brothers & Barnum & Bailey Circus at Benning Road and Oklahoma Avenue Northeast. Officials, taking every precaution, cut the show short 15 minutes. A number of spectators seated below the snag became nervous but no one was injured.

Organized labor warned President Roosevelt yesterday that A. F. of L. and C. I. O. representatives may withdraw from the War Labor Board if he signs the Connally-Smith antistrike bill.

Describing sections of the measure as "patently unconstitutional," A. F. of L. President William Green, C. I. O. President Philip Murray, and David B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, sent President Roosevelt a detailed analysis of the bill—thus continuing their campaign for a veto of the measure.

Provision of Bill Cited

The labor spokesmen branded it as "the worst antilabor bill passed by Congress in the last hundred years."

It was understood that Murray and Green spoke for their organizations, with Robertson speaking only for himself because of lack of time to contact representatives of all the independent railroad labor organizations.

The provision of the measure forbidding WLB members to "participate in any decision in which such member has a direct interest as an officer, employe, or representative of either party to the dispute," was viewed as making necessary labor withdrawal from WLB.

The statement expressed the belief that C. I. O. members could not sit on C. I. O. cases and A. F. of L. members could not sit on federation cases under this section.

Atlantic Too Hot For Hitler U-Boats

London, June 17 (AP).—An informed British observer said today that Germany's submarines were being so badly mauled in the Atlantic that they were being withdrawn to seas where they can get a measure of air protection. There, he said, they likely will prove to be troublesome.

He did not elaborate, but others said the Bay of Biscay, the North Sea, possibly the Mediterranean and limited use of the English Channel seemed the likeliest to them.

Housekeeping Aides' Retention Also Urged At Budget Hearing

A directive to the District Commissioners to prepare increased estimates to meet the needs of the District's 2000 dependent children and urgent pleas for the retention of the Housekeeping Aides as a District-financed project were highlights yesterday of hearings before the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee considering the District budget.

After learning from Director of Public Welfare Ray L. Huff that he had a staff of only 18 to look after the 2000 children who, as public charges, have been placed in foster homes here, Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming, subcommittee chairman, announced he favored a larger appropriation in order to curb juvenile delinquency.

"The general pressure," O'Mahoney said, "is taking more parents away from homes. Fathers go into service leaving the mother unable to provide for the children on her allowance. Homes are harder to find because of the influx of population. The search for foster parents and the investigation of their fitness must go on."

Continuation of the Housekeeping Aides was urged by the Washington Board of Trade, the Federation of Citizens Associations, the Volunteer Citizens Committee, the Joint Committee on Public health,

Nazis Fail To Win Back Lost Ground

Reds Smash Attacks; Big German Drive Reported Off Due To Materiel Lack

By the Associated Press

London (Friday), June 18.—The Red army was reported officially early today to have smashed repeated German efforts to regain lost positions north of Orel for the fourth straight day yesterday, but the enemy is throwing "fresh troops into action" on this sector where it has been expected the Germans would launch a summer offensive.

In contrast to German high command reports of only "local activity" in Russia, the midnight Moscow bulletin said the Germans had suffered "heavy losses in manpower and materiel" northwest of Mtsensk, which is 40 miles above Orel, in "unceasing attempts" to regain several villages recently overrun by the Red army.

A foreign source in London who has reliable contacts inside Germany said the Germans had planned a powerful offensive in the Orel sector, to begin two days ago, but said it was postponed at the last moment when Field Marshal Gen. Fedor von Bock discovered inadequate supplies at forward bases.

Red Offensive Predicted

Berlin on the other hand predicted that the Russians themselves were planning to launch a major campaign in the same sector. German broadcasts recorded by the Associated Press suggested the Red army would strike within three weeks.

No matter what the German intentions are, the Red Air Force kept up its pounding of rear-line German bases.

Long-range Russian bombers started 100 big fires on German airdromes Wednesday night, a special Moscow announcement said. Explosions also were touched off in ammunition dumps, and hangars and parked planes were damaged in raids that cost the Russians two planes.

3 Munitions Dumps Blasted

The effectiveness of these raids, in conjunction with the heavy British attacks on the Ruhr's munitions factories, would appear to be borne out in the foreign source's report that Germany's summer offensive has been delayed by lack of supplies.

Moscow's midnight communique, recorded by the Soviet monitor here, also pointed out that in one recent raid on Mogilev, German rail and river base on the upper Dnieper 250 miles northwest of Orel, the Red air forces blew up three ammunition dumps, smashed

Rome Radio Also Tells of Troops At Turkish Border

By the Associated Press

London (Friday), June 18—The Rome radio broadcast a report early today that "large British forces are concentrating along the southern frontier of Turkey," after previously telling its listeners of "many landing craft concentrating from African coasts toward Pantelleria."

The broadcast, recorded by Reuters, apparently was Italy's interpretation of the closing of the Syrian-Turkish border. There was no confirmation from Allied quarters, and none, of course, was expected even if the report were true.

Italians stressed the difficulties that nation faced in emphasizing that one million Allied troops were massed in North Africa and that the greatest concentration of warships in history opposed the Fascist fleet.

Difficulties Same

Indicative of Italian invasion nervousness, a Rome broadcast told of an Axis aerial attack continuing "unrelentingly against many landing craft concentrating from African coasts toward Pantelleria, against a concentration of naval units in that bay, and against enemy convoys sailing east from Gibraltar."

The broadcast asserted that the "difficulties in attacking the European fortress are still the same."

This eastern Mediterranean area apparently had produced another great worry for Hitler, with the Moscow radio reporting that the

Strong Nazi Curbs On Ambassador's Activities Blamed

By Frank Brutto
Associated Press Staff Writer

Bern, Switzerland, June 17.—Turkey has recalled Behic Erkin, its Ambassador to France, in protest against strong German restrictions on his embassy in Vichy, a Turkish diplomatic source said today.

Erkin's recall to Ankara was not yet considered a rupture in relations between Turkey and German-occupied Vichy, this source said, but it could be a step in that direction. A Turkish Embassy counselor, M. Sevdat, also was told to return home.

The move occurred on the eve of the anniversary of the signing of a German-Turkish friendship treaty June 18, 1941, and as German propagandists were declaring that Germany was "fully satisfied" with Turkey's political position, despite "Anglo-American intimations — increasing in number of late—that Turkey already had made its choice in favor of the Allies."

Allied Pressure Reported

The whole affair served to focus still more attention on the military and political situation in southeastern Europe and the Middle East, coming as it did at a time when Allied leaders had sealed the Syrian-Turkish border to "protect troop movements" in Allied Syria, and when persistent reports said that Germany's

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

American airmen have scored one of the greatest and most one-sided aerial victories of the war, shooting down 77 Japanese planes over Guadalcanal with a loss of only six United States aircraft.

A brief Navy communique reported only the destruction of 32 Nipponese bombers and 45 Zero fighters in air battle over the southeastern Solomons Wednesday, but military men here saw possible great significance in the Japanese defeat.

The enemy, it is believed, would hardly send such a large aerial armada — probably considerably over 100 planes—against Guadalcanal unless their objective was an important one to the progress of the South Pacific war.

Jap Plans Disrupted

In routing the Japs by a 13-to-1 score, our airmen have completely changed the military picture in the area for the next few days, at least. If the large-scale raid was a prelude to an enemy offensive, the air defeat should entirely disrupt their plans, or if the Nips were attempting to break up impending American offensive action, their ability to stop it is now greatly weakened.

It seems unlikely that the Japanese would send so large a force unless they hoped to knock out our Guadalcanal base, or perhaps some warship concentration or convoy nearby. There have been hints that the long lull in the Pacific is about to be broken, probably by American forces.

Civilians Face Additional Food Cut, Davis Says

New York, June 17 (AP).—Civilians are due for an additional food cut "in the near future," Chester C. Davis, War Food Administrator, said today as he declared bluntly that the food supply would be "large enough for health and strength for all—but not for waste."

Following the food chief's address, the league adopted a resolution opposing Government grants of subsidies to farmers on the basis that such grants would not be a good substitute for "fair prices."

Ginsburg Files Held Showing OPA Seeks Grip on Industry

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer

The secret files of David Ginsburg, former chief counsel for the Office of Price Administration, show that OPA is trying to control American industry by controlling its profits, Harold L. Allen, counsel for the Smith House Committee Investigating the Acts of Executive Agencies, charged yesterday.

OPA Chief Prentiss Brown denied the charges in a prepared statement submitted at the daylong committee hearing. Brown said the OPA "has no program with respect to reduction of profits, as such."

In support of his contention, Allen quoted at length from a confidential price policy instruction issued to the staff of the price department by J. K. Galbraith, former OPA official who recently resigned.

The Ginsburg files were obtained under subpoena after the committee learned that on leaving the OPA to join the Army the former OPA counsel had sent the bulk of the contents of his files to his home in West Virginia.

"Under the guise of wartime price control set up by Congress to prevent runaway inflation of prices," Allen charged, "the Office of Price Administration is seeking to bring the entire American industrial system under bureaucratic control by regulating not the prices of its products, but by controlling the sum of its profits, and by freezing them at the level earned by industry during the period 1936-39, irrespective of whether there has been an increase in the price of the manufactured commodity.

"There is no authority for such a policy to be found in the statutes," Allen continued, "either in Justice Matthew F. McGuire declared yesterday that he was making an example of Anna May Swift, 59, when he sentenced her to serve from 40 months to 10 years in prison for violation of the White Slave Act.

Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly charged the woman was a veteran of 20 years standing in the vice racket and of operating elaborate houses of prostitution in the District and in Chevy Chase, (Md.)

In passing sentence, Justice McGuire declared:

"We cannot overlook the fact that one of the purposes of punishment, one of the purposes of trying to work out justice in an imperfect world, is to hold up the example of punishment.

"This woman is charged with a very serious crime—it is a crime that is a stench in the nostrils of decent people in a civilized community.

"The court and the world can look with pity upon a prostitute that plies her trade unabashed and unashamed upon the public highway, but when you get a woman who is not a prostitute herself, but who commercializes sexual debauchery merely for profits and lives upon the earning of other women, catering to the jaded libertine and the degenerates, I think she is not entitled to one single iota of mercy from this court.

Channel Convoy, Rail Transport Smashed by Bombs

By the Associated Press

London (Friday), June 18.—Keeping up a week-long pounding which culminated Wednesday night in the 116th raid on the industrial city of Cologne, a large force of heavy R. A. F. bombers was heard passing over the coast early today, apparently heading agaon for Germany.

They followed a number of fast planes which struck out for France about midnight, returning a short time later.

An indication that the Allied planes were again heading toward Germany was seen when the Berlin radio interrupted its overseas transmission for "technical reasons," its usual way of announcing that R. A. F. planes were attacking.

Last night's raid on Cologne was again aimed at the heavy concentration of Nazi war industry along the Rhine River, already heavily hammered.

Other preinvasion air fleets shot up all three ships of a Channel convoy and rail transport on the continent in early morning hours, and Allied planes kept sweeping over during the day to eontinue the punishing blows on the Axis.

Bomb-shattered Cologune, target of the first 1000-bomber raid on May 30, 1942, was last struck in a heavy night assault on February 26, when 600 acres of the city were reported devastated. It was raided lightly again April 9, then given a respite until last night.

The Air Ministry announced simply that R. A. F. bombers "attacked objectives at Cologne and elsewhere in the Rhineland," but the attack was undoubtedly carefully aimed to demolish reconstruction in communications, a m m u n i tion plants, chemical works, power stations and other war-important operations.

The foray by the heavy bombers, coming after a Tuesday night break in the hammer blows on German industry, cost 14 big planes with one fighter also lost, the Air Ministry said.

Returning pilots said that the attack on Cologne caught the city's defenses off guard

In almost hourly offensive sweeps over the continent, R. A. F. fighters shot down a total of nine German fighters during the day. Two of the raiders failed to return.

The Germans put a socalled "front line reporter" back on the air again tonight to buck up the bomb-nervous industrial workers of the West, and D. N. B.'s military correspondent maintained that Allied bombing wasn't doing much military damage.

The "front line reporter" in a broadcast from "the terror scarred western part of Germany," declared that "all people are equally affected. All have to stay put. All suffer. All have to cooperate . . .

"More than once," said the broadcast, a German fighter pilot "up over the Rhine River was attacking an enemy aircraft when he saw from some 3000-feet altitude how his own house was hit."

French Committee Removes Three Obstacles From Path of De Gaulle-Giraud Unity

By Daniel De Luce
Associated Press Staff Writer

Algiers, June 17.—The French Empire's infant provisional government cleared away today three major obstacles to unity and efficient wartime rule.

Meeting for the first time in plenary session, 13 members of the French Committee for National Liberation took these steps to eliminate the quarreisome confusion which had reigned in Algiers for a week:

Organized the committee and agreed on its procedure.

Discussed the angry issue dividing Gens. Charles de Gaulle and Henri Giraud—the reorganization of the French armed forces and their command—and arranged to make decisions on the basis of majority vote.

Sponsored a study toward the creation of a consultative assembly whereby public opinion could be given more forceful expression during the time when no legislative branch of government exists.

By these actions the committee, with Giraud presiding, remedied the political paralysis which had gripped French administration while the committee itself had been a mere paper body and the seven original members had appeared to let the six other appointees wait out in the cold.

The agreement on majority rule was not stipulated in the communique issued after the session, but a committee spokesman told the press it was understood by all participating.

The spokesman added that the necessity for the signatures of both De Gaulle and Giraud on decisions was "purely administrative" and indicated that neither could exercise veto power by refusing to sign matters approved by a committee majority.

Adherents of Giraud and De Gaulle appeared equally pleased by what had been achieved and one committeeman—who had been appointed by Giraud—asserted: "An absolutely democratic institution has now been born."

De Gaullists maintained that they could get majority support for his program of drastically purging former Vichy sympathizers from the army and navy, provided this was done without seriously interfering with the French war effort. They added their leader's position would be further strengthened when Henri Bonnet, the fourteenth member of the committee, arrives from the United States.

De Gaulle has been insisting also on his own appointment as commissioner of national defense and the subordination of Giraud, as commander in chief, to the committee.

$27,637,000,000 Naval Bill Ready For Final Action

By the Associated Press

A $27,637,000,000 naval appropriation bill, largest in history for the expanding fleet, was made ready yesterday for final congressional action today, when House and Senate conferees adjusted differences.

The conference added $173,539,000 to the appropriation total approved by the House by accepting Senate amendments providing additional funds for pay, training and maintenance of naval personnel.

The measure carries $9,118,000,000 for construction of surface vessels and $4,583,000,000 for 29,142 airplanes.

The final draft of the bill carried a Senate amendment authoriznig construction of replacements for overage combat vessels and warships lost in action.

The Senate had written into the bill a clause transferring $2,786,000,000 in direct appropriations into contract authorizations, but at the insistence of the House delegation that provision was removed and the straight cash appropriation left in.

Mosquito Planes Raid Sicily and Italy

By Noland Norgaard
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 17—Mosquito bombers from the Malta force—one of the three Allied air arms which have been pounding at the Axis throughout the Mediterranean — have smashed once again at enemy communications and military centers in both Sicily and southern Italy.

This was disclosed today in a Malta communique, while headquarters here was announcing that bad weather had grounded the great northwest Africa bombardment squadrons for the first time in more than two months. From this area, only routine patrol and reconnaissance was possible yesterday.

The Mosquitoes hit the railway sidings and docks of Termini-Imerese, a north Sicilian port, with both bombs and cannon fire and raked a half dozen other targets, including railway bridges and stations in southern Italy.

At sea, an Axis destroyer escorting a convoy was gunned and there was a brilliant flash astern; a minesweeper also was raked with fire.

To the 16 Axis planes previously reported shot down in heavy Allied offensive air action over Monday night and Tuesday, a headquarters announcement today added five enemy craft for a total score of 21 in that period.

War Prisoners Doing 'Good Job' in Canada

Lethbridge, Alberta, June 17 (AP). About 5000 prisoners of war now are helping sugar beet farmers through a critical labor shortage in Southern Alberta and are doing a "good day's work," Col. E. S. Doughty of Ottawa, liaison officer for the Canadian federal department of labor, said today.

Colonel Doughty added that every opportunity to use volunteer workers from among prisoners of war now will be pursued, but such action would be governed strictly by international agreements.

Free Relief Abroad Urged by Lehman

Liberated Nations' Credit Must Not Be Impaired, He Says

By the Associated Press

New York, June 17.—Americans cannot live with security in a world "half rich, half pauperized," Director Herbert H. Lehman of the Office of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation Operations said here tonight.

In an address for delivery before the Foreign Policy Association, Lehman urged outright gifts of relief supplies to liberated nations whose credit for future reconstruction loans might otherwise be impaired by their inability to repay relief advances.

Recalling the system of American relief loans after the last war, he said that:

"Most of these loans were subsequently defaulted, and our Government thus was no better off than if the loans had been outright gifts. On the other hand, the country receiving relief suffered an impairment of its credit and was less able to borrow for sound projects of reconstruction so long as these loans still complicated its finances."

The ultimate result, he continued, was an impairment of economic recovery which helped to put those forces in motion which led to another world conflict.

"To avoid the danger of permitting relief to cause fundamental economic derangements which might generate a third world war," Lehman said, "a careful balance must be maintained between relief by outright gift and relief by sale or exchange. None of the liberated nations will be seeking the charity of this country. But in some instances it certainly will be the course of prudence and wisdom to advance the goods for relief and rehabilitation as outright gifts."

Lehman cited the North African situation as evidence that relief of civilians behind the lines is a military necessity, but, he added, it is not military necessity alone that calls for adequate relief and rehabilitation measures.

"If we have learned anything from the decades just behind us it is this: That we can not, even if we would, make ourselves secure in a world in which millions of men, women and children are dying of want or by epidemic.

"We cannot live with security," he emphasized, "in a world half-rich, half-pauperized. International trade cannot flourish or sound economic expansion take place in a world tormented by expectations of the violence that is born of suffering and misery."

Lehman described the draft agreement for creation of a United Nations relief and rehabilitation administration, now under consideration by the United States and associated nations as a step toward international solution of a relief task too great for any one nation.

U. S. Pilots' Opinion

Lightnings Called Better Than Zeros

Two American Army Air Force aces just returned from Guadalcanal declared yesterday that the Lockheed Lightnings they flew in the South Pacific far outstrip the Jap Zeros and that United States pilots have it all over their Nipponese opponents.

"They fly by rote," said Capt. Thomas G. Lanphier, jr., telling how most Jap pilots "pull right up" when attacked, making it easy for the next Yank fighter pilot in the formation to get them.

"We know that the Nip will do one of two things when attacked," said the 27-year flier with seven enemy planes to his credit.

"We guess which he'll do and go for him. If we guess right, we've got him. If we guess wrong, we're still all right and the next man will shoot him down."

Americans Improvise

On the other hand, Lanphier continued, American airmen are taught a number of maneuvers to evade an attack when the enemy has the drop on them. Often they figure out new tactics when in a tight spot.

"We know from interrogating prisoners," the airman continued, "that the mental level of most of the Jap pilots is pretty low. They wouldn't have a chance of passing the entrance tests for American air schools.

"I think someone has been kidding the Japs, telling them they are unbeatable. Under questioning they all say: 'Americans aren't smart. Americans are not a fighting people.' Well maybe we aren't a martial people, but we catch on damn quick when we have to."

Jap Courage Ridiculed

Lanphier termed reports that the Japs are "do or die" pilots, "a lot of nonsense."

"The best way to get them is to head straight for them," he added. "They usually pull off and then you've got them."

Both Lanphier and Maj. John W. Mitchell, another fighter pilot from Guadalcanal, who has eight Jap planes to his credit, were enthusiastic about their Lightning fighter planes. They said that it could "outclimb and outfight any Zero ever built" and was the "best plane in the air in the South Pacific."

The top airmen spent much of the time during the interview talking about how important is the "wingman"—the teammate of the "ace" who flies on his wing to protect him from attack.

"They seldom get planes of their own because they're busy protecting the lead men," said Lanphier. "They are the unsung heroes of the war."

Million Servicemen Seen Discharged By End of 1943

New York, June 17 (AP).—A total of 1,100,000 men will have been discharged from the armed services between 1940 and the end of 1943 for all causes, says Col. Lewis Sanders, chief of the reemployment service of the Selective Service System of New York.

Of this number 500,000 were discharged up to the end of 1942, Colonel Sanders said yesterday at a conference on manpower rehabilitation called by Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, regional director of the War Manpower Commission.

He cited figures showing that of a representative group of 4714 men, 19.77 per cent were let out for psychoneurosis—the largest single cause.

Mexicans Flee Paricutin Volcano

Mexico City, June 17 (AP).—With molten lava reported advancing at the rate of 70 feet an hour from two craters of Paricutin volcano, all the inhabitants of Parangaricutiro were being removed today to the village of Caltzontzin.

The volcano has been active since last February, but several days ago a second crater opened and the lava flow apparently doomed the village in its path.

Cigarette Price Ceiling Studied, House Group Told

By the Associated Press

Rowland Jones, jr., Washington representative of the National Retail Druggists Association, yesterday testified that the Office of Price Administration is "considering a Nation-wide ceiling price on cigarets," and a committee member commented this might mean an intention to eliminate brands.

Testifying before the special committee studying OPA regulations, Jones said discussion of a possible cigaret regulation took place "at a meeting of the tobacco section of OPA the first week in June."

"You have given us very valuable information on this subject," Representative Wolverton (Republican of New Jersey remarked to Jones, adding, "That may indicate an intention of OPA to provide for one cigarette only and eliminate brands."

Jones, saying he spoke for 28,000 independent druggists, told the committee they objected to the OPA rubber goods sundries regulations from the standpoint of "price ceiling, grade labeling and differentiation in price ceilings for different classes of retailers." He said "We want one maximum ceiling price for all."

Upper Yangtze Losses of Japs Put at 40,000

By the Associated Press

Chungking (Friday), June 18.—Approximately 40,000 Japanese were killed or wounded in the 40-day battle for the upper Yangtze River, a Chinese army spokesman said today.

"Less than two-thirds of the entire Japanese force thrown into the battle managed to escape from the Chinese trap," he declared.

The Japanese, striking below the Yangtze River at points between their big bases at Ichang and Yochow, for a time had seriously threatened China's vital "rice bowl," but the Chinese have virtually recovered the entire area in a strong counteroffensive supported by American and Chinese airmen.

Chinese troops at present are fighting on the outskirts of Owchihkow, on the right bank of the Yangtze 90 miles southeast of Ichang, and Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters announced yesterday that U. S. planes caused many fires and extensive damage there Tuesday in supporting attacks.

The U. S. bulletin said the Americans attacked the warehouse area of the city at Lotus Pond inlet, and also announced that a greatly outnumbered force of American planes the day before had destroyed six Japanese planes and probably destroyed three others in a battle southwest of Nanchang. No American planes were lost.

Six Jap Boats Destroyed

New Delhi, June 17 (AP).—United States medium bombers destroyed six medium sized river craft in Japanese service on the Irrawaddy near Mandalay yesterday and wrecked or damaged five large boats, a Tenth United States A. A. F. communique said today.

In other blows at the enemy's Burmest communications, railway cars and trackage were reported damaged at Paukkan. Direct hits were scored on warehouses and sheds in the Japanese barracks area at Thazi. All raiders returned safely.

The British said that R. A. F. Wellington bombers again attacked Buthedaung, on the Mayu River in western Burma, last night.

Contractor Calls Delay of Work Treason in Navy Profit Report

By the Associated Press

A Minnesota war contractor testified yesterday that his engineers had to spend 10 days on profits reports for the Navy, "while merchant ships are waiting for gun mounts" and "I think it is treason."

Thumping a 2-foot pile of the firm's record which he said were used in determining a renegotiation of profits, John B. Hawley, jr., president of the Northern Pump Co. of Fridley, Minn., said that besides taking time needed for production, such proceedings were discriminatory and unjust.

"How in the name of God am I going to take care of my 50,000 workers" in the postwar period on profits adjusted to 2 per cent after taxes, Hawley asked the House Naval Committee.

Agreement Reached

He informed the committee that he and the Navy Renegotiation Board had reached an "amicable" agreement only yesterday—"it's a babe one day old"—under which he will refund 16 million dollars on his company's 1941 and 1942 business.

Hawley, in his own words the "world's greatest hydraulic machinery designer," declared he was not so much interested in profits as such as he was in the use to which they can be put, "because profits are only an instrument for production."

He said that without the machinery designed, developed and manufactured by his company, "you wouldn't have any Navy, and after Pearl Harbor, this country would have been in one sad fix."

Opposes Statute

Hawley said that he preferred increased taxation to continuance of the renegotiation statute to recover excessive profits. He declared, however, that if the renegotiation statute continued on the books, it should be changed to provide:

1. No renegotiation on profits on shipments made prior to April 28, 1942. (That was the date the renegotiation law went into effect, applicable to contracts then in effect as well as future war production contracts.)

2. Establishment of a minimum profit in like industries, so that manufacturers "could have something they could count upon."

3. Allowance of 1 per cent of profits for postwar reconversion and emergency contingencies.

Viereck Goes on Trial Here Today

George Sylvester Viereck will go on trial today charged by the Government with failing to register as an agent of the German government.

Viereck was convicted of the charge in September of 1941 and spent almost a year in jail before the United States Supreme Court reversed the conviction on technical grounds.

Viereck is also under two indictments charged with conspiring to undermine the morale of the armed forces. Named in the same indictments were 32 other persons. At the present time the Government is preparing evidence to present before the July grand jury in which it will seek a third indictment against most of the defendants.

Republicans Seek to Outlaw Subsidy Funds

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Congressional Republicans yesterday singled out OPA appropriations for the first direct test of Administration food subsidies in a surprise flank attack on the price rollback program.

An amendment barring use of OPA funds for paying salaries, expenses or disbursements in any way related to the subsidy program was proposed as a rider on the 165 million dollar OPA appropriation.

Representative Everett Dirksen (Republican) of Illinois said he will put the amendment to a House vote today, ahead of the expected subsidy showdown on the Commodity Credit Corp. loan bill in the House next week.

Dirksen moved for a complete subsidy knockout amid signs of Administration gains in House and Senate Banking Committee drives to frame subsidy restrictions. Ranking Republican members of both groups had announced modified amendments which would validate in effect subsidies now being paid on meats, butter and coffee.

On another food front the Administration won temporary respite from congressional fire. The House Agriculture Committee postponed action on a bill shifting OPA price and rationing powers to War Food Administrator Chester Davis until War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes can present the Administration case.

Chairman Hampton P. Fulmer of the House Agriculture Committee said Byrnes will appear before the group in executive session this morning. The former Supreme Court Justice already has told ranking members of the committee that transfer of pricing to a production agency will play hob with inflation controls, and the President is backing Byrnes to the limit.

Nonetheless, Fulmer said, the committee plans to go ahead with its food "czar" bill. Fulmer said the committee would hear Byrnes "as a metter of courtesy" but plans to report a bill making the food power shift within a week.

Dirksen started drafting his anti-subsidy rider following a House speech in which he slapped at the Administration's handling of the acute corn shortage and denied subsidies would solve the food problem.

He told the House the Administration's proposal to pay processors to roll back the retail price to consumers "would all be very simple were it not an illusion."

"But who's going to pay the United States Treasury?" he asked. "This is just a deferred tax. If the consumer doesn't pay it in this generation, the next generation will have to."

Representative John Taber of New York, ranking minority member of the Appropriations Committee, led the House attack on subsidies but indicated he would defer to Dirksen to offer the test amendment.

Taber denied the legality of subsidy payments to processors, and said he will call on the General Accounting Office to hold up any outlay for that purpose.

"If we pay a subsidy on food to keep the cost of living down, we have got to pay a subsidy upon coal to keep the cost of living down, and before we get through there will be no bottom left in the Treasury," Taber told the House.

Congress Shapes Restrictions On Agencies Like OPA, BEW

Congressmen last night polished up a series of amendments to restrict the size and policies of such key Government war agencies as the Office of Price Administration, Board of Economic Warfare, and Office of War Information.

Some members who had waited a year or more for a chance to get their hands on the purse strings of these agencies and others of the 18 for which nearly three billion dollars was recommended to the House, were ready to follow up yesterday's general criticism of policies with either drastic money reductions, or restricting limitations on policy.

Representative Taber of New York, ranking Republican member of the House Appropriations Committee, set the pace for an attack on the three agencies, and later predicted that in the present "temper" of the House, any "reasonable cut in funds" would probably be approved.

Taber disclosed that various members were considering plans to chop the OPA appropriation from the 165 million recommended to the House down to the level of its appropriation for this year, 120 million, or possibly below.

House Democratic leaders believed they could stave off any drastic cut on the price agency. Price Administrator Brown told Congress that his request for more than 177 million was hte absolute minimum upon which the agency could do its job.

Attack on the BEW was expected to center on the level of its salaries and on attempts to restrict sharply some of its programs, including increases for export programs and travel, totaling at least four million dollars.

Representative Dirksen (Republican) of Illinois said that he was preparing an amendment to require that OPA officials engaged in formulation of price regulations for particular industries should be able to show actual business experience in those industries. A five-year experience requirement was a possibility, he said.

Representatime Patman (Democrat) of Texas, said he planned to ask an increase for the Smaller War Plants Corporation from $12,006,000 to 18 million dollars. "I feel they should be given a real opportunity to prove their worth, they have made a wonderful start," said Patman. He added that he would oppose cutting the OPA money.

Democratic leaders were expecting an attempt to chop the domestic branch of the OWI out of existence, a move suggested by Taber, but thought it could be defeated.

In debate, Taber hit the BEW, OPA and OWI in turn. He said that Price Administrator Brown had made "some improvements" but had not moved fast enough cleaning out the "long-haired professors" and "green lawyers."

"He ought to take one day off and fire the whole bunch," said Taber. He was supported by Representative Brown (Republican) of Ohio, and Wigglesworth (Republican) of Massachusetts in urging an OPA housecleaning to make way for "practical businessmen."

Taber charged that the BEW's imports division budget called for 730 employes at an average annual salary of $3500, and he protested that the BEW's attitude was to "regiment all of our economy not only now but after the war—they are making many cockeyed plans for that purpose."

At one point Taber attacked the OWI for "spreading false stories," and at another criticized what he called "the total incapacity of our Government to function intelligently."

Representative Celler (Democrat) of New York defended the OWI as an agency whose chief, Elmer Davis, was a Democrat doing a wonderful job, but which had drawn at least half of its key officials from the ranks of prominent Republicans. He identified them also as "enlightened." He said the Appropriations Committee had been "too niggardly" in its recommendation for the agency.

A Democrat, Representative Lesinski of Michigan, however, said that Davis, although an excellent newspaperman and radio commentator, had "failed" as an administrator. He objected that OWI propaganda aimed at Poland and occupied Baltic countries was slanted in favor of Russia, and said that the "OWI experts are telling the people in the occupied countries about the greatness of Russia."

Turkey Recalls Envoy to Vichy; Ties Strained

Balkan satellites were seeking a means of escaping the Axis camp.

The German Transocean Agency reported in an Ankara dispatch that Premier Gen. Nuri Pasha Es Said of Iraq had issued an order of the day to his troops saying, "The hour of decision and active service" was approaching. Iraq joined the war against the Axis last January.

Berlin Radio Speculates

(Berlin's broadcast said this alleged order, together with the closing of the Syrian-Turkish border, and the silence of radio stations at Beirut, Jaffa and Jerusalem, made it possible "that the Anglo-Saxons in the near future will launch a military action from the Levant." Berlin also found a possible explantion in "an intensified war of nerves" on the part of the Allies.)

Besides registering a protest against German Gestapo surveillance of the Turkish embassy in Vichy, another reason advanced for Erkin's recall was pressure on the part of Allies, who hope that Vichy will retaliate by recalling Gaston Bergery, its Ankara ambassador.

Allied quarters hold that Bergery "is too friendly with the Axis; sees too much of (German Ambassador to Turkey) on Papen," said this source, who cannot be identified by name.

Pivotal Turkey has a mutual assistance pact with Britain which never has been implemented, and recent Turkish utterances have indicated that Turkey has been impressed with the thoroughness and striking power of British and American military power in the Mediterranean theater.

Relations Described as Strained

Relations between Vichy and Ankara were reported very strained, with the Turks especially angered at the Petain-Laval regime due to German interference.

The German secret police were said to have instituted a close watch recently on the Turkish embassy at Vichy, forbidding it to use code messages. The embassy was allowed to continue the use of a diplomatic pouch, but, acording to this Turkish diplomatic source, the pouch was opened at the border and examined.

A Vichy agency distributed a statement tonight quoting "circles close to the foreign affairs ministry" as saying that nothing was known of a reputure of relations between France and Turkey.

Turkey was not the only country whose foreign missions were encountering trouble in France. The Vichy correspondent of the Gazette de Lausanne reported that all foreign consulates in the Mediterranean coastal areas of France had been order to move into the interior.

(An Algiers broadcast recorded by Reuters said Germany had asked Turkey to recall the consul in Mytilene, capital of the Greek island of that name in the Aegean Sea, off the Turkish coast, 170 miles northeast of Athens. The Turkish consul at Salonika, a likely landing point in an Allied invasion, was reported already recalled.)

Craft Reported Near Pantelleria

chief of the German security police, Ernest Kaltendrunner, had been rushed to Rumania to reorganize the police, and that the situation in Bucharest appeard "very tense." Many leading politicians were reported hiding. A Rome broadcast of a Bucharest "official communique" denied yesterday's Ankara reports that Rumania was seeking peace.

Underground movements in Rumania and Bulgaria were reported in Cairo to be becoming stronger, and more outspoken.

Eight Czechs Executed

Eight more Czechs were executed in Prague, presumably for sabotage, the Czecho-Slovak government in exile announced.

In Stockholm, Prime Minister Per Albin Hansson said all civilian authorities had received instructions for "resistance to the last" in event of invasion of Sweden.

Madrid reported a powerful Allied fleet of 75 ships in Gibraltar Harbor, including a battleship, two aircraft carriers and 10 destroyers.

One Italian commentator said "British authorities are getting more and more nervous as the zero hour for major operations approaches," and the German radio warned invasion would mean "a blood bath without precedent."

Knox to Cancel Navy Deal With Standard Oil Corporation

Lands Committee on May 28, charged that one result of the contract was to advance to Standard Oil, without interest and for five years, 15 million dollars' worth of Navy oil.

The same committee was told yesterday by Representaives Elliott (Democrat) whose California district embraces the Elk Hills reserve, that "this (contract) has some of the inklings of Teapot Dome."

The legislator's reference was to the oil leases scandal that disrupted a Republican Adiminstration more than two decades ago and recalled that Elk Hills, as well as Teapot Dome, was a locale for that scandal.

The Navy's announcement, made public following receipt of notification from the company that it was willing to cancel the contract, declared that Knox's "own investigation established the fact that no improprieties had been employed by either party to the negotiations."

"The Acting Attorney General has asked me to say that the Department of Justice wishes to join me in the latter statement and concurs fully and emphatically."

Testimony before the House Appripriations Subcommittee indicated that neither the Department of Justice nor Interior Secretary Harold Ickes who shares with the Navy responsibility over oil leases in the area of the naval reserve, was consulted on the contract until after it was signed.

Fortas Questioned Policies

The contract was brought to Ickes attention, unofficially, in February, and the Secretary asked his Undersecretary, Abe Fortas to study the document. In March a memorandum by Fortas questioning the economic policies involved was forwarded to Knox by Ickes who urged that the contract be resubmitted to the White House for reconsideration by the President.

Later that month, Knox sent the contract back to the White House together with Fortas' memorandum and his own defense of the agreement. Mr. Roosevelt then referred the document to the Department of Justice, and, in recent days, Attorney General Francis Biddle announced that the case was under investigation and that the Navy would withdraw its request for funds from Congress.

Knox said that the decision to terminate the contract "was due to the legal opinion of the Department of Justice that the proposed arrangement exceeded the authority granted by law." He stated that "necessary adjustments" will be made.

"The agreement, which was announced by the Navy last December, provided for the temporary and limited operation of the field as a unit," the Navy statement read: "The field is owned in part by the Navy and in part by the company and the proposed contract enabled the Navy to conserve the field by controlling future production by Standard.

"Settled Policy"

"It has been the settled policy of the Government for many years to acquire control of these lands and to conserve the oil in the ground. By act of June 20, 1938, Congress authorized the Secretary of the Navy to make agreements with private owners for such conservation or to purchase or condemn their lands. Except for one small parcel, Standard Oil is the only remaining private owner in the reserve. Without cooperation between the parties, the operation of Standard Oil Co.'s wells would drain oil from Navy-owned land, imparing their value."

Referring to Admiral Stuart as a "distinguished officer," the Navy said the contract was negotiated by him in "good faith and mutual anxiety to resolve this problem which has been a major concern of the Navy for many years."

"It (the contract) provided for conveyance of Standard's lands to the Government, for operation of the field as a unit, for limited production for the next five years to contribute to current war needs, and for shutting in the wells altogether thereafter in the Navy's sole discretion."

The Navy declared "unwarranted and false" statements that it intended to keep the contract a secret. It pointed out that the agreement was discussed in trade journals and copies of it were made available to the House Appropriations Committee following the public announcement last December.

At about the time of the Knox announcement, H. D. Collier, company president, issued a statement in San Francisco, declaring:

"This contract was proposed by the Navy Department and was designed to consolidate the area under Navy control in the interest of conservation and to insure perpetuation of the area as a naval reserve in the public interest. As compensation, Standard of California was to operate at absolute cost the combined properties as a single unit in the Navy's behalf, and to secure its proportionate and legitimate compensation for its percentage of the total reserve out of production."

Both the company and the Navy, said Collier, believed the congressional authorization to have been "fully adequate" to support the contract. He said "it would appear . . . that the sole question is one of interpretation of the law," and declared the agreement "fundamentally" fair to "both parties" and "in the public interest."

Collier asserted that, with the contract canceled, "this company will, of course, continue to own and operate its land in the Elk Hills, pending further negotiations with the Navy."

(Testimony before the House subcommittee made it clear that a major factor impelling the Navy to make the contract was knowledge that continued production by Standard in the reserve would drain oil from under Navy holdings.)

The Elk Hills reserve, richest in the world with the exception of one in Arabia, is believed by Government geologists to hold between 300 and 300 million barrels of oil in a shallow zone and from 50 to 100 millions in a lower zone. The area embraces 43,793 acres of which approximately 8300 acres, or 20 per cent, are held by Standard. The Geological Survey, however, has concluded that Standard's lands would produce 36 per cent of available oil, while the balance of 64 per cent would come from Navy lands.

By its contract with the company, the Navy authorized Standard to withdraw oil from the entire reserve at the rate of 15,000 barrels a day for the duration of the war, but not for less than five years. All of the approximately 27,500,000 barrels authorized were to have been produced by the company without current payment to the Navy, although its share of the oil, assuming 15,000-barrel-a-day production, would have been about 18 million barrels at the end of five years.

12 Million Barrel Net

From the 18 million barrels, the company was to have deducted six millions to compensate it for production costs, leaving a net of 12 million barrels for which the Navy was to be paid after expiration of the five-year period. Payment was to have been made to the Navy in oil, or, at the company's option, in its own refined petroleum products at going prices at the time.

Payment in oil was to have been made from petroleum produced from the reserve after the five-year period. The contract stipulated that after this period production was to have been reduced to 750 barrels a day, 36 per cent of which would have belonged to Standard and from which apportionment it was to devote one-third to making repayments to the Navy.

On this basis the Navy would have been repaid its oil at the rate of 90 barrels a day, a circumstance which would have made it necessary for the Navy to wait 365 years for payment in full, although Representative Whitten (Democrat) of Mississippi, a member of the Naval Appropriation Subcommittee, which twice examined Admiral Stuart on the contract, estimated that it would take 450 years for Standard to pay off its obligation.

Representative Voorhis charged in the House on May 21 that, not only for five years, but for the "future life of this oil field," the contract would have meant the Navy could obtain no oil from its own reserve except by selling it to Standard and then repurchasing it.

He pointed out, in addition, that by giving the company the option of repaying the Navy for its oil in refined petroleum products Standard was provided with an opportunity "to compute as a part of its repayment all the profit involved through the whole operation of producing and refining oil."

Voorhis, as well as some administrative officials of the Government, voiced strong opposition to the monopoly features of the contract. Voorhis declared that it was apparent from the face of the contract "that it gives to one of the largest major oil companies of America a monopoly of the largest reserve in America."

The Navy sought $1,784,408.15 from Congress to pay Standard for development costs and for its share of equipment on the property. An additional $1,151,601.25 was asked to purchase equipment of four competing oil companies, three of whose leases in the reserve were cancelled upon expiration.

Littell was summoned before the Public Lands Committee by its chairman, Representative Peterson (Democrat) of Florida, after Voorhis called the committee's attention to the contract in connection with hearings on a bill, sought by Ickes, to protect the Navy's reserve by providing for termination of all private oil leases both on the reserve and within one mile of its boundaries.

(Voorhis began by saying that the burden of his remarks would be that, under the contract, "there is not a great deal left to protect.")

Littell Statement Brief

Littell's statement was brief. He said:

"I have made an exhaustive examination of the contract, both on the facts and on the law, and I have reached the conclusion that the contract is illegal and invalid under the Act of June 30, 1938. This analysis has been submitted to Mr. Justice Byrnes (director of the Office of War Mobilization) but has not yet reached the President.

"Since this is primarily an executive problem, it is only fair that the President should have an opportunity to act."

Regardless of what action the President might take, Peterson asserted, the committee would go ahead with its investigation of the Navy's deal with Standard Oil. He recalled Littell for examination Tuesday, promising:

"The whole thing will be searched most thoroughly."

In the Senate on June 10, Senator Langer (Republican) of North Dakota charged that, under the contract, oil would be "given away" to a company which "has placed its officials in key spots in the Roosevelt Administration." He named the officials as:

Ralph K. Davies, former vie president, who, he asserted, continues to deceive $56,000 a year from the firm while being paid $8000 as deputy petroleum administrator for war; Howard Marshall, attorney, and aide to Davies in Washington; Mark Thornburg, oil adviser to the State Department, and Ed Pauley, treasurer of the Democratic National Committe, who sold his oil interests to Standard and who is "on intimate terms with the President."

Strike Bill Held Bar to Labor on WLB

are provided for a violation of this provision, nevertheless, the decision will be subject to challenge by anyone adversely affected by it because the labor union's officers or representative participated in the case and in the making of hte decision.

"We seriously question whether A. F. of L. or C. I. O. officials can remain on the board, since they could not participate in any case involving one of their affiliated organizations. By remaining on the board and participating in these decisions, the labor representatives will merely encourage court attacks upon the decisions and encourage disobedience on the part of employers, on the claim that the decision of the board is a nullity."

Previously, Green and Murray attacked the measure in separate letters to the President. C. I. O. members of WLB have already indicated that they fear the measure will turn them into "policemen" for an anti-labor bill, making their withdrawal from WLB imperative.

The three—Green, Murray, and Robertson—plan to continue their attack tonight with a Nation-wide broadcast at 9:15 p. m. over the Mutual network. President Roosevelt has until June 25 to make up his mind on the measure. Congressional sources have indicated that he will sign it.

The statement asserted that "despite the fact that the sponsors of the bill vociferously proclaimed against strikes in wartime, the bill expressly encourages strikes."

"There is substituted for the no-strike pledge for the duration of the war," the statement said, "a brief cooling-off period, after which a strike may be called. Note the fact that a majority vote against the strike does not prohibit striking. The 30-day notice and the ballot (required by the bill) are merely conditions precedent to striking; it does not provide that in the event the ballot is negative as to striking, a strike may not be called."

Another provision of the measure was attacked as tending to "hamstring" the War Labor Board "by involving it in considerable litigation respecting orders granting maintenance of membership." It was also charged that the rights of minority groups working in Government-owned plants were impaired.

"Its enactment," the statement said, "follows the tactics of the Fascists who, as a forerunner to totalitarianism, first attacked and destroyed free trade unions in Germany and Italy. It does more—it destroys the foundation on which the principles of collective bargaining rest.

"All that has been built up during these past 10 years is now being rendered ineffective and virtually destroyed by limiting, circumscribing and prohibiting the normal functioning of trade unions through this vicious enactment. Compulson, civil damages and criminal penalties are the unholy trinity by which this act accomplishes its evil purpose."

The broad language of the measure was assailed as catching "many innocent persons . . . in the dragnet of conspiracy." The statement interpreted discussion of grievances at a union meeting or in the press along with the furnishing of food to the families of strikers as coming under the bill's ban on "inducing, encouraging" or otherwise aiding strikes and strikers.

"The section clearly violates the constitutional guarantee of freedom of speech, because a union worker, or for that matter, any citizen, is prohibited from even stating that the demands or grievances of the union are just," the statement declared.

The section forbidding labor unions to make political contributions was described as "eloquently" presenting "the true purpose behind the bill—namely to weaken and destroy trade unions, for it is not conceivable that prohibition of political contributions has any relation to production for war."

the Price Control Act of January, 1942, or its amendment, the Stabilization Act of October 2, 1942. The Office of Price Administration bases its action largely upon Executive Order 9250, part of which, relating to the fixing of salaries at a $25,000 level, has heretofore been repudiated by Congress."

Henry M. Hart, jr., associate general counsel for OPA, denied before the committee that the agency interpreted the executive order as giving it powers beyond the limitations of congressional statute. The order simply "reinforced" OPA powers, Hart said.

Hart was asked about a memorandum from Ginsburg's files addressed to Galbraith and signed Henry M. Hart, jr., Nathaniel L. Nathanson and Henry S. Reuss headed "Legal Power of OPA to Reduce Profits."

The memorandum read:

"In addition the Directive (the Executive Order No. 9250) constitutes a mandate to the price administrator that, wherever he takes price action (for whatever reason) he is obliged to reduce profits to the lowest levels to which under the rules laid down above, they may legally be reduced."

The memorandum was dated November 10, 1942. Hart said he did not recall the memorandum, and asserted it did not represent present OPA policies. He protested against making public inter-office memorandum of OPA.

The Galbraith memorandum, which deals with the policy and procedure in the reduction of prices, states:

"Whenever profits are found to be unreasonable and exorbitant, the maximum prices of the commodity or group of commodities in question must be reduced to a point which is calculated, in the light of realized and probable future changes in output and costs, to prevent producers, in general from realizing net profits, before income and profits taxes, which are in excess of the limits set forth above.

It should be remembered "that this criterion is to be employed solely for the purpose of so reducing prices as to eliminate unreasonable or exorbitant profits. It is not to be employed in determining whether or how far prices are to be increased or whether or how far they are to be reduced when action is taken on other grounds."

Hart maintained, under the heated questions of committee counsel, that OPA considered profits only as part of its price-fixing task as set forth by congressional statute.

In a statement read by Hart, Brown maintained that OPA was concerned only with increases in margins of profits that have occurred during the war. He said also that OPA has never sought to control profits of individual concerns.

Axis Agitation In Texas Race Riot Suspected

By the Associated Press

Beaumont, Tex., June 17.—City officials suggested today that enemy influence may have inspired the race riots of the last two days which resulted in the deaths of two men, injury to scores and extensive property damage in the Negro section.

Authorities enforcing martial law called a court of inquiry for this afternoon to investigate the disturbances.

Chief of Police Ross Dickey said "there have been rumors of Fifth Column activity here and we have been checking up on them."

City Attorney Albert Tatum said a physician's examination of a white woman cast doubt on her story that she had been raped by a Negro while her husband was at work at a war plant.

Appeal to Shipworkers

Col. Sidney C. Mason, in command of State troops enforcing martial law, called for the military hearing.

In an address to shipyard workers, Mason asked them to refrain from any action that would revive tension.

Shipyard officials, who asked Mason to speak and who declined to be quoted by name, said the workers were overheard discussing the possibility of taking from authorities the 300 men reportedly held for military court inquiry.

Seventeen prisoners were brought before the court and all except one were released. He was turned over to city authorities. The court will reconvene tomorrow.

Earlier, the colonel said the Negro section of Beaumont was "literally stomped into the ground" during the outbreaks.

"From a destructive standpoint, it equals the Meuse-Argonne sector of the First World War," Colonel Mason added.

Colonel Mason's comment on the damage was made as this southeast Texas city of more than 100,000 persons awoke today under the watchful eye of some 2400 peace enforcement personnel under his command.

The city had its first undisturbed sleep in two days after rioting which started late Tuesday night had taken the lives of one white man and one Negro.

Bus transportation was resumed today and most retail establishments were again open for business.

Up to 20 Negro Homes Burned

Some establishments had closed because of lack of help after Negroes were ordered off the streets. Others closed to keep crowds from congregating.

Numerous arrests were made for violation of the curfew order barring from the streets all persons not having essential business through the night hours.

The destruction in the Negro section, Colonel Mason explained, included the burning of up to 20 Negro houses and establishments, and the wrecking of a beer parlor.

The first of the incidents leading up to the disturbances occurred about a week ago. A white girl telephone operator reported to police that a Negro, later fatally shot by officers, attacked her near a warehouse.

In the second case, the housewife, mother of three children, told police a Negro yard worker attacked her after she had hired him to work at her home.

D. C. Venereal Disease Fight Hampered by Lack of Drugs

By Bert Kemmerer

Prominent Washington physicians yesterday charged that the District of Columbia's program for fighting venereal diseases has been definitely hampered by the action of the armed services in taking over most of the arsenoxide, or mapharsen, the drug now commonly used in combatting syphilis.

The word of these physicians is authoritative, but because of medical ethics involved they did not wish to be directly quoted.

They are all specialists in the social hygiene field.

All of them agreed that mapharsen has been off the market for four months.

This followed testimony given to Congress on Monday to the effect that the Army was rejecting men with syphilis at the rate of 47.7 per 1000, while rejections from the District ran 92.7 per 1000, from Virginia, 80.8 and Maryland, 77.3 per 1000.

However, it was explained that District specialists can secure the drug, upon application, from the Public Health Department.

Because of the actual shortage of physicians in the District, time also is considered a vital factor in combatting venereal diseases. They feel that the stamping out of syphilis and gonorrhea is vitally necessary as a part of the war effort.

Those physicians who expressed themselves about the scarcity of mapharsen also stressed the point that it was "somewhat of a problem" to go to the Health Department when the drug is needed.

Ironically enough, one of the doctors interviewed, is a pioneer in bringing into general practice the use of the drug and in collaboration with another prominent District physician introduced it five years ago—he did all of the clinical work while his coworker made extended experiments with animals.

Although all but universal in its application, the drug which is a derivitive, or refinement of salvarsan (606) is comparatively new.

Mapharsen is manufactured entirely by one firm in the United States.

There is simply none to be had from private sources.

Those interviewed agree that the services cannot possibly use up all of the supply they have on hand.

One physician explained explicitely that "they cannot use half of what is produced."

Distribution of mapharsen remains a problem to be solved, although several methods as temporary expediencies have been brought forth.

One of them—distribution to the physicians through drug stores—is dismissed as impractical.

While there has been only an indication, social hygiene authorities think that the District Health Department may finally solve this question by distributing the drug through the various health centers in Washington.

More than 100,000 doses of arsenical drug—which includes both mapharsen and neo-arsphenamines—are required annually in the District of Columbia.

From July 1 to December 31, 1942, 18,000 doses were given by private physicians and 30,000 given in clinics, hospitals and other institutions. Sulfa drugs, also used in the treatment of gonorrhea are available in quantities estimated to last for a year.

should not be mentioned among descent people of a decent community.

"This thing goes on and will go on as long as the courts look at it with some sort of supercilious eye and refuse to invoke the penalty which the statute says should be invoked or can be invoked.

"Now, she has pleaded guilty to three indictments. I have read the report of the FBI and it is a report that you would hesitate to read twice. The case is of an entirely different character from the ordinary case of prostitution. It is commercialized vice of the rankest, deepest and lowest form.

"It is bad enough to have a man, but when you have another woman fattening upon the earnings of women, no matter who they may be, and imposing upon a decent neighborhood under the guise of respectability, coming into this court and saying that she is a college graduate with a very fine background, she is a hypocrite and I am going to send her away."

The woman was arrested last January when local police and FBI agents raided her establishment in fashionable Chevy Chase. Ten girls, who were taken into custody at the time, were later released after testifying before the grand jury regarding the operations of the house. Advertisements carried in the telephone directory and other publications represented the place as a massage parlor.

Just before sentence was passed, her attorney, M. J. Sawyer, Boston, Mass., told the court that his client was in very ill health and that her reputation had always been good. Police records show that she had been arrested eight times on vice charges since 1918 and that she served three months in jail in 1938 after being convicted in New York of running a disorderly house.

many railway trains and killed several hundred Germans in a raid shelter. Quoted reports presumably received from guerillas.

Outnumbered Russian troops defending a height in the Belgorod sector below Orel were reported to have killed 125 Germans in a successful local fight; on the Volkhov front southeast of Leningrad another 150 Germans fell to Soviet mortar and machine-gun fire, and a Finnish group was repulsed on the Karelian front above Leningrad.

But the main sector still was around Orel, 200 miles southwest of Moscow, and German propagandists insisted that the Russians were getting ready for an offensive of their own in that area.

A Berlin broadcast reported Russian troops massnig around Kursk, 9 miles south of Orel, and said there might be "large-scale military developments there" soon.

A foreign source with reliable contacts inside Germany, who cannot be more fully identified, said June 16 was chosen for a limited German attack pivoting around the Orel salient 200 miles south of Moscow.

Even this decision to make a limited attack came only after a controversy between Field Marshal Gen. Fedor von Bock, commander in chief in Russia, and Lieut. Gen. Eberhard Warlimondt, who succeeded Gen. Franz Halder as Hitler's principal strategist.

Warlimondt and Hitler wished to stake Germany's chances on another full-scale drive against the Red army, this source said. Von Bock objected, saying that in view of the Tunisian disaster and the growing power of the Allies, it would be madness to mount an offensive that might use the last reserves and denude invasion fronts.

The informant said Von Bock resigned, but later agreed to retain command when the limited offensive plan was substituted, and that Warlimondt then resigned.

Views Differ On Retraining Of Nazi Youth

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

Dr. James G. McDonald, chairman of the President's advisory committee on political refugees, said yesterday that postwar re-education of Nazi youth along Christian and democratic lines can best be effected through Germany's own Christian forces.

He characterized as "silly" the idea that teachers sent from this country could "re-educate" Nazi youth.

Dr. McDonald, also honorary chairman of the Foreign Policy Association, New York City, addressed 250 churchmen at Hood College, Frederick, Md., at a regional conference on a just and durable peace, sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches and the Maryland-Delaware Churches and Council of Christian Education.

The speaker emphasized the need of immediately setting our political, economic, social and religious machinery in order to alleviate the problems of feeding refugee millions, providing them with medical care to prevent spread of plague, and to establish bases of order after the war.

Commissions on the bases for a just and durable peace have been in session at the parley, and will present their report of final sessions today. Conference findings will be used subsequently for study in churches of this region.

Dr. Mordecai Johnson, Howard Univerity president, will speak today on "Domestic Foundations of a Just and Durable Peace."

score, it seems likely that the Yankee plane strength in the southeastern Solomons now is considerably greater than during the days of the battle for Guadalcanal.

A large force of fighter planes must have met the Jap air fleet. Probably the enemy planes ran into a trap laid by our airmen.

More Information Awaited

The Navy last night was still awaiting further word of Wednesday's battle. It announced the first dispatch on the action in a bulletin shortly after noon, which stated:

"A brief report received from the south Pacific reveals that in an air battle over Guadalcanal on June 16, U. S. planes shot down 32 Japanese bombers and 45 Zero fighters. Six U. S. planes. No further details have been received."

From past experience, it is not unlikely that some of the pilots of the six missing American planes will turn up safe. Moreover, the Jap toll may mount as our airmen chase the crippled fleet home.

The victory may set something of a record for a single aerial engagement. It tops the 74 German planes shot down by Allied airmen off Cap Bon, Tunisia, on Palm Sunday. Considerably more Jap planes were destroyed in the Battle of Midway, but this was a three-day battle extending over a wide area of the mid-Pacific.

Upper Solomons Bases Hit

One hundred and fifty-six Nipponese planes were shot down during a single day's fighting in the Battle of the Santa Cruz Islands last October 26, but a large—though unannounced—portion of these were destroyed by antiaircraft fire.

During the height of the Battle of Britain, R. A. F. pilots shot down 185 German planes on the peak day, September 15, 1940. Here, however, there was a series of air battles running from morning until night, ranging over southeastern England.

Sixty-five Nazi planes were destroyed at Kursk last month, 46 of them in aerial encounter with Russian pilots.

While our Army, Navy and Marine Corps fighter pilots were beating the Japs over Guadalcanal, Navy Dauntless dive-bombers and Avenger torpedo bombers, escorted by Navy Corsair fighters, were attacking Jap bases in the upper Solomons. Fires were started at installations on Choiseul Island.

The day before (June 15), Navy Dauntless and Avenger bombers, escorted by Navy Wildcat fighters, pounded Jap bases in the western part of New Georgia Island, also in the middle Solomons. Fires were started and heavy explosions were observed.

The early war bulletin also reported attacks by Navy Ventura twin-engined bombers on the Japanese base on Kiska, in the Aleutians. Hits were scored on the airfield runway, in the main camp area and on antiaircraft batteries.

and the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society.

An appropriation of $42,000 was requested for the Housekeeping Aides, and all spokesmen urged that the District Health Department be put in charge of the program and the name be changed to Family Health Aides.

Harry S. Wender, president of the Federation of Citizens Association, and John H. Connaughton, vice chairman of the public utilities committee of the federation, urged that funds be provided for a people's counsel to appear to represent the people in public utility cases. Wender brought up the recent decision of the Public Utilities Commission regarding three tokens for a quarter as evidence that the people need representation before the PUC.

He recorded the endorsement of the federation on lifting relief ceilings and demanded more assistance at the dog pound.

Wender said that in view of the $70,000 raised by dog taxes, the $17,000 spent here on care of dogs was "niggardly." He asked for two assistants to the poundmaster and two cars equipped with radios. He also said that lists of dogs and their owners should be sent to each precinct so that lost dogs could be promptly returned.

Wender also asked for the creation of a psychiatric clinic for the Juvenile Court, which he said was one of the greatest needs in the District.

Appearing on behalf of the Washington Board of Trade, Granville Gude, president, urged that $5000 be included in the budget to be applied to the upkeep of Columbia Hospital.

He also urged budget retention of a $503,000 item for purchase of school sites; a $79,358 appropriation for the District Recreation Department, and reinstatement of funds originally recommended for a motor vehicle parking agency.

Gude concluded his testimony with a suggestion that in view of the increase in the working week for District employes from 39 to 44, the Commissioners require the heads of departments to reexamine personnel requirements.

OWI Chief Hits Back at Critics In Congress

By the Associated Press

Lashing back at two congressional critics, Elmer Davis said yesterday that statements made by Senator Bridges (Republican) of New Hampshire about the Office of War Information (OWI) were false and that criticism from Representative Short (Republican) of Missouri was "mostly nonsense."

"Bunk" was another comment interpolated by the OWI director as he read to a press conference from statements by Bridges and Short printed in the Congressional Record.

The two Congress members criticized Davis for his speech in Boston last Monday to the American Newspaper Guild in which the OWI director expressed the opinion that Washington news is "less adequately covered than any other news in the world."

Bridges asserted Davis was seeking "to silence the Nation's press to cover the sins of maladministration on the part of the New Deal in the war effort," and also declared that OWI had "prevented industry from telling the full story of production."

Denies Bridges' Charge

"That is false," Davis emphatically told his press conference. "I do not know what evidence he could have twisted into that conclusion."

Short said that Davis' Boston speech made it evident the OWI director "conceives his real title to be that of American propaganda minister." He also said Davis should "return to his office as chairman of the New York American Labor Party."

After termining Short's remarks "mostly nonsense," Davis said his highest office in the Labor Party was membership on a county committee which had more than 2000 members." He called Short's reference to him as a former New York chairman of the party "an example of his accuracy."

When reporters pressed him for an elaboration on his statement that news from the National Capital is not adequately covered, Davis said, "that, perhaps, was a large statement," but contended that news from overseas is "better covered."

Gives No Specific Examples

Reasons|h shrdluetaoincmfwypetau

In his Boston speech, Davis complained particularly about the publicity given to disagreements among Washington bureaucrats. Today, he conceded that official bickering is legitimate news, but said overemphasis created the impression that Washington is principally the scene of dog fights.

Asked for specific examples where the press had failed to cover adequately important war developments, Davis replied that his speech was based on "general impressions."

During the press conference newsmen asked Davis about reports of a possible personnel shakeup in the OWI high command. Told that there were reports of a conflict within OWI, which might lead to his departure, Davis said they were "news to me." A reporter then asked whether he proposed to "dispense with the services of Lowell Mellett."

"I don't know," Davis replied.

Mellett, formerly head of the Office of Government Reports, which was absorbed by OWI, now heads the OWI motion picture bureau. He long has been close to President Roosevelt, and currently is listed in the Congressional Directory as an administrative assistant to the Chief Executive.

Stands on Full Text of Speech

Because of the prospect of reduced appropriations, Davis said, it might be necessary to curtail activities of the picture bureau. He added that he did not know how Mellett would feel about taking charge of a drastically curtail bureau.

Mellett, Davis said, has had arguments with "certain other" OWI officials, "in most of which, I think, he was right."

Attired in a white suit and wearing a black bow tie, the ruddy complexioned OWI chief opened the press conference with a brief discussion of the military situation, then turned to the criticism of his Boston speech. He said he stood on the full text of the address, "but not on sentences yanked from the context." An Associated Press story of the speech was "a very good report," he said, but suggested his critics read the entire text of his remarks.

Workman Trapped 13 Hours in Sewer Had a Good Time

Cleveland, June 17 (AP).—Trapped 65 feet underground in a sewer for more than 13 hours, Gordon Tempany, 54-year-old construction foreman, was rescued today by desperately toiling city firemen.

Suffering no ill effects, the foreman jokingly told rescuers, "I had a good time."

Tempany dashed into a watertight concrete compartment last night to escape drowning as water gushed into the construction project.

For 10 hours he kept in touch with his rescuers by telephone, then the communications circuit went dead. Rescuers exchanged signals with the foreman by tapping on an air pipe after the telephone line went out. Rescue squads operated three pumps at top speed for several hours before removing enough water from the tunnel to permit Tempany's release.

Bomber Crew Saved After Savage Fight

By Leo Branham
Associated Press Staff Writer

A U. S. Bomber Station in England, June 17.—The Flying Fortress Shackeroo, limping homeward after weathering one of the most savage air battles of the war to bomb Kiel June 13, was forced down in the North Sea by fighters diving out of clouds in a suicidal attack.

The entire crew, two of whom were wounded, survived.

Ten hours after the battered Shackeroo plunged into the ocean 90 miles from England, British torpedo boats ploughing through the high-running sea, sighted the shivering crew huddled together in a rubber lifeboat.

One boat picked up the survivors and returned immediately to England.

Explosion of 20-millimeter cannon shells in the bomber nose wounded Navigator First Lieut. Arivd S. Dahl and Bombardier Lieut. Deguindre McGlaun, but not seriously. They and Sergt. Joseph Ferrin, who suffered from exposure, are expected to leave the hospital in a few days, wing headquarters said.

The Shackeroo was in the thick of a ferocious sky battle as the Nazis, in an effort to intercept the raiders, sent up every type of aircraft they could get off the ground —Focke Wulf 190's, Messerschmitt 109's, Messerschmitt 110's, Messerschmitt 210's, and Junkers night fighter-bombers.

The Fortress crew estimated the enemy fighters numbered well over 200, and said they formed in lines of two, three and four abreast and attacked the Fords in waves from the front and rear.

The bombers lost 24 planes in the day's operations. At least 65 German planes were shot down.

Although the Shackeroo was badly hit over the target area, Pilot Maj. Louis G. Thorup doggedly continued on to make the bomb run with one engine on fire and the ship filled with smoke from cannon bursts in the nose and radio compartment.

One burst set fire to a parachute on which Sergt. Joseph F. Griffen sat, but the gunner kept the hard-pressing Germans from delivering mortal blows.

The Shackeroo, in a badly thinned group which had borne the brunt of the enemy attack, had outdistanced swarms of enemy fighters and was halfway home on the 1000-mile roundtrip when three Messerschmitt 109's dived down out of the clouds and pounced on the formation.

"Our gunners got two of them," said Kirk, "but that third one was the most persistent devil I have ever seen. He didn't give a damn whether he lived or not. He'd line himself up and come at us with guns blazing. We poured lead at him by the barrel full. So did the other Fortresses.

"He made four suicidal passes right through our entire formation. On the second sweep he knocked out our No. 1 engine. He saw it smoking and made a third pass pointing right at us. On his last pass he really gave it to us—but that was his last one. Sergt. Eugene H. Jones, who was on his first raid, shot his tail clean off and down he went."

The Shackeroo, its control cables shot into flopping shreds, operating on only one engine and with its tail section stabilizer shot out—rapidly lost speed and altitude and plowed into the ocean.

Capt. Franklin Colby of San Diego, Calif., pilot of another Fortress which dived down to offer cover to the Shackeroo, said "Thorup's ship flew so low that the props were throwing up sprays of water. It looked like the Fortress was sailing through the sea and with half its tail shot off it really was a helluva sight."

Crewmen of Colby's bomber tossed out one of their rubber rafts.

The crew of Shackeroo tied two rafts together and tried rowing.

Hearing planes many hours later the crew fired a flare and were seen by two Bostons flying on a mission.

"It wasn't long after the Bostons left," Kirk said, "when he saw four torpedo boats ploughing dead on into us. They weren't after us but they took us aboard."

News Guild to Expose Actions Of Press Delaying War Effort

By the Associated Press

Boston, June 17.—The American Newspaper Guild today voted to accept a minority report calling upon the guild to "assume the responsibility for exposing actions of the press destructive to the war effort and opposite to the best interests of the American people."

The report which came from a minority of the officers' report committee subcommittee on labor press and the Guild Reporter declared that "some portions of the commercial press constitute feeble and faulty weapons against our national enemies."

It recommended the establishment of permanent machinery by the guild to conduct a continuing analysis "of the role of the press in this war and in the period devoted to the planning and winning of the peace."

The report also recommended that committees be established in locals and be made responsible to the guild officers and the international executive board to produce material and research to the manent committee.

A majority report of the same committee, which also was adopted by the convention, made four recommendations concerning the setting up of a specific standing committee whose purpose would be to:

"1. Encourage the exercise of the greatest care, accuracy and fairness in the handling of the news.

"2. Expose actions of the press which are disruptive of the war effort.

"3. Urge the establishment of committees in locals to contribute material and reseearch to the standing committee.

"4. Provide to the Guild Reporter and all other publications in which it can obtain space comment upon the activities of the free press during this wartime."

Earlier, the convention by a roll-call vote of 98 to 78 refused to admit newsboys and news vendors to membership in the organization.

Milton Murray, president of the guild, who was elected to that office November 1, 1941, in the first national referendum election, was nominated again today by the approximately 125 degelates.

Also nominated again for two-year terms were incumbents Sam B. Eubanks, executive vice president, and Wilbur W. Rodgers, secretary-treasurer. There was no opposition.

Nominations and renominations for vice president at large, only five of whom can be elected, included Joseph Walsh of Wilkes-Barre, William J. Farson of Philadelphia, Floyd Healey of San Francisco, Gordon H. Cole of Washington, D. C.; Milton J. Lapine of Cleveland, Stephen Murdock of San Jose, Calif.; Al Jackson of Chicago and William E. Caine, jr., of Newark, N. J.

Planes Destroy 8 Jap Barges

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in Australia (Friday), June 18.—Forty Japanese planes raided the area of Bena Bena, 90 miles northwest of Lae, yesterday for the third straight enemy strike at that sector, the high command announced.

Elsewhere on New Guinea, four Japanese planes raided Port Moresby and one was hit by antiaircraft fire.

Eight Japanese barges were destroyed and 12 damaged by Allied bombers near Lae.

As on the previous two raids, the communique said little about the Bena Bena attack other than to report it. The sector which has emergency landing fields has not been mentioned prior to the raids.

However, a spokesman at headquarters of Gen. Douglas MacArthur said there were no casualties and the raiders' bombs burned four native huts. The raid was carried out by 18 bombers, escorted by 22 fighters.

Tuesday 57 enemy planes were sent against the area, 27 of them bombers. Wednesday six bombers and six fighters formed the raidnig party.

The Bena Bena area, inland from the north coast of New Guinea, is considerably above the Japanese bases of Lae and Salamaua, long threatened by infiltrating Allied troops from the south whose front line is at Mubo, 12 miles below Salamaua.

On New Britain Island, medium bombers and attack planes went after the airdrome and supply dumps at Cape Gloucester after which a four-engined bomber got in some blows.

WLB Decision Against Lewis Is Indicated

Prospects for Government operation of the country's coal mines for the duration of the war increased yesterday amid indications that the War Labor Board was about to hand down a decision in the coal case which John L. Lewis would reject.

Public board members who hold the balance of power in this case were said to be leaning toward turning the miners down without any "portal-to-portal" adjustment, although a grant of an increase under $1.50 a week in accordance with a strict interpretation of the Fair Labor Standards Act also was said to be in the picture.

Finishing Touches

The public members went into another session last night to iron out differences and put finishing touches on formal written opinions in the case.

Informed officials cautioned against a flat prediction at this time, pointing out that the public members might come out of their conference with an entirely new formula which had not been discussed in board meetings.

It was understood that the labor members were prepared to dissent against the projected decision, believing it entirely unacceptable.

Under the circumstances it was likely that the final decision would be taken by an 8-to-4 vote, with public and industry members joining to comprise the majority.

Barring unexpected developments, a decision was expected for today.

United Mine Worker officials scoffed at suggestions that the board's adjustment would be of "token" proportions at best—making it likely that Lewis would refuse to accept such a decision.

The U. M. W. policy committee met yesterday afternoon and adjourned until 2:30 p. m. today without taking any action. Lewis has held the group in Washington to enable it to act on the coal decision.

With the country's back against the wall of another strike deadline—midnight Sunday—informed quarters believed that the Government would endeavor to arrange for continuous Government operation of the mines for the duration to avert a third general coal stoppage.

The mines have been operated by Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes since May 1 when the first general coal stoppage occurred.

Jamestown Local Assails Strikes

John L. Lewis and the War Labor Board were put on notice yesterday by the Jamestown, Pa., local of the United Mine Workers, that it objected to wartime strikes and favored letting WLB and the Office of Price Administration solve the mniers' cost of living problems.

A resolution from Local 1318, sent to the U. M. W. Policy Committee meeting here and to WLB asserted "strikes would help Hitler to defeat our country, destroy our unions and force us into slavery."

Newcomer Chosen For House Place On D. C. Committee

From a House membership always reluctant to serve on the District Committee, a newcoer was selected yesterday by the Committee on Committees and his nomination sent to the Speaker.

The nominee to the District Committee is Representative Thomas G. Abernethy (Democrat) of Mississippi, former mayor of Eupora, Miss. Elected to the Seventy-eighth Congress, Abernethy is 40; married, and has two children.

At the same time Representative Klein (Democrat) of New York was nominated to the Labor Committee, and Representative Bland (Democrat) of Virginia was nominated to Library Committee.

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

The BIG-6 Classified OPA-4

Have you noted recently, the posting in each of our stores, of the official Office of Price Administration classification designation—OPA-4?

We think a brief word of explanation is due our customers. All retail food stores in the country, without exception, are so listed under one of four classifications, namely—OPA-1, OPA-2, OPA-3, OPA-4; the rating being based according to the company's annual sales volume. Each class prescribes a different set of ceiling prices, with those in the first three groups being permitted correspondingly higher ceiling price levels than OPA-4.

As your GIANT STORES are all in the lowest ceiling price classification unit, OPA-4, the Office of Price Administration therefore rules that we must SELL at LOWEST PRICES.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

The Duke of Windsor is too modest to take credit for it, but one reason we are getting ahead of the submarines today goes directly back to his intervention with the United States Navy to get a secret antisubmarine device developed and used.

The device was invented by Lieut. Comdr. Carl Herluf Holm, an American naval officer, born in Denmark, who has been working for years on a method of protecting merchant vessels and who gave the Navy the benefit of his invention.

Naval bureaucracy, however, held up the device for approximately two years. And it was to help blast the antisubmarine weapon out of this red tape that the Duke of Windsor intervened. Having known Holm and being convinced that his invention had merit, the Duke wrote several letters to high-up friends in Washington urging that Holm's plan get a thorough test.

Chief stumbling blocks were: first, that the Navy is always a perfectionist; wants to have a new weapon absolutely perfect before it is adopted, and Holm's invention required considerable experimentation; second, the device became the victim of rivalry between three different Navy bureaus.

They were (1) the Navy's Ordnance Laboratory, which is under the Navy Yard; (2) the Bureau of Ordnance and (3) the Bureau of Ships. Among these three it got bogged down. For two whole years the invention moved with snail-like speed—at times didn't move at all.

During at least one of these years Allied shipping was being sunk at the sickening rate of one million tons a month. The public did not know this at the time, but the Navy knew it. Nevertheless, the Holm device was not lifted out of the red tape snarl.

It was to help push the device that the Duke of Widsor put in a friendly hand. Not being an American official, however, he could not be too forthright. So in the end it was an executive of the War Shipping Administration, Fred Searles, who finally blasted the Holm device loose.

Searles threatened that if the Navy did not get busy and use the antisubmarine weapon, the Maritime Commission would take the invention and place it on all their merchant ships.

This finally got action.

Note.—Other reasons for the improved submarine situation are better detection devices, United States Air Corps raids on Nazi submarine pens and, especially, the fact that with long days and better summer weather, airplane patrols are much more effective.

"Wallace In Wonderland"

Henry Wallace's global thinking is food for at least one wisecrack, usually from Republicans, at almost every social affair the Vice President attends.

Latest to ram Wallace about it was Alice Roosevelt Longworth.

"How do you do, Mr. Vice President," said the acid-tongued Alice when the two met at a cocktail party. "How is everything in never-never land?"

"Oh, about the same as in Wonderland, Alice," Wallace shot back.

WAVES Train Men

Strange as it may seem, WAVES are now teaching their masculine brothers of the Navy an important step in how to fly. What's more, WAVES are training men in the use of firearms and are also doing repair work on damaged airplanes.

The pilot instructors are called "Link trainer operators." Their job is to teach men the technique of blind flying in a device which remains on the ground, but which simulates all the conditions of flying.

The naval aviator climbs into the cockpit of this instruction device, pulls the hood down, puts on the earphones and operates the instruments just as if he were flying. The WAVE, acting as instructor, sits at a table a few feet away and communicates with the pilot by radio telephone regarding his simulated course.

When the fight is finished the WAVE tells the aviator "You failed to check in at Floyd Bennett Field" or "You were flying too low for that spot of bad weather near Hartford."

About a hundred enlisted women are already at work instructing male pilots and there will be 500 before the year is over. It is tedious, nerve-racking work, requiring a woman's patience, and the WAVES are doing an A-1 job.

As for shooting, the WAVES put dummy guns into the hands of their brother sailors and, with the help of movies, show the men how to shoot down enemy planes. Images of enemy planes are projected on a movie screen, and the pilot, sitting in a mock turret, "attacks" these planes by firing a beam of light.

There is complete simulation of combat conditions, including the sound of guns and the sound of aircraft motors. WAVES operate the devices, not only instructing students in firing, but also scoring the accuracy of their fire.

WAVES have a reputation of being chic and natty, but in addition they are replacing men in many important jobs. The Navy says that the men do not resent being trained by the WAVES.

Correction

Last week this column reported that Vice President Wallace, Attorney General Biddle and Alien Property Custodian Leo Crowley had overruled the State Department, the Commerce Department and Nelson Rockefeller on the important principle of establishing international cartels on the German pattern in Latin America. Specifically, it was reported that a plan to place some of Mexico's drug, chemical and dye companies, formerly German, in a monopoly under American Cyanamid had been blocked and that President Roosevelt himself had written a note opposing future cartels.

This column regrets that it now has to make a correction. Although the above facts were correct at the time, the State Department is now trying to reverse the President.

For after the conference was over, it was the State Department's job to draft a note to the Mexican government informing it of the American Government's position. And when the note was shown to representatives of other Government departments they were amazed to find that the American Cyanamid deal was approved, after all.

What the State Department did was to condemn monopolies and cartels, but then proceeded to say in effect that Mexico should go ahead with the American Cyanamid deal anyway.

Alien Property Custodian Crowley previously had received written authorization from the Uresident to oppose the American Cyanamid monopoly in Mexico. But now the State Department is reported to be going over Crowley's head to the White House.

The issue is important because the Mexican drug arrangement will set the pattern for future operation of German properties in Latin America—whether they will be in the hands of one big company such as American Cyanamid or be subject to free competition among vaious companies.

WHO'S COMPLAINING?

Capital Transit conducts a big business. One of the biggest, probably at the very top, excepting the Telephone Company, in the District of Columbia, when it comes to the number of transactions our sales force of operators makes each day. Those transactions number around a million and a half, so the chances for incidents that displease passengers are many indeed. We do get complaints about various phases of our business. Every transit company does. We never expect to make our service perfect or to please everyone of our riders at all times under all conditions. We're not kicking about those complaints, although sometimes they may be unreasonable in view of the circumstances. But we were greatly heartened by the fact that during the early days of the Bus Service reduction the complaints were comparatively few. The riding public took the unpleasant features of those cuts in service as patriots. They realized at once that it had to be done—and quick!

Kaiser Dispute Action Termed Racket-Guard

House-approved legislation which would protect the A. F. L.'s closed shop agreements in the Kaiser shipyards was attacked by the National Labor Relations Board yesterday as immunizing "a lucrative labor racket" and defended by the A. F. L. as Congress' reply to the "apparent fiendishness" of the NLRB.

The legislation would prohibit the board from considering complaints against a labor agreement which had been in existence more than three months. It was adopted as an amendment to a measure appropriating funds for the NLRB.

Commenting on the House's action, the NLRB said in a statement, "It is inconceivable that a branch of Congress which has so recently passed such legislation as the Hobbs bill and Connally bill, aimed at curbing oppressive practices by union organizers at the expense of individual workers, would intentionally immunize the most lucrative labor racket which has perverted the war production program. Yet that is precisely the effect of the amendment."

Deliberate Turmoil

The A. F. of L. promptly replied that the action "was undoubtedly taken to prevent the NLRB from deliberately throwing the Kaiser yards into a state of labor turmoil, and because members of Congress who have heard the board members have been amazed at the apparent fiendishness with which they are acting."

The NLRB has been investigating closed shop contracts between the Kaiser yards and A. F. of L. metal trades unions. It has issued a complaint charging the contracts were made in advance of the employment of any substantial number of workers and that the workers therefore were denied their statutory right of choosing their own bargaining agent. The A. F. of L. metal trades department sponsored the amendment approved by the House.

The NLRB said that under the terms of the amendment "no contract, regardless of whether made with a completely company-dominated union, or made with other unions as a result of collusion, fraud, or duress—and completely regardless of whether the contracting union has any members whatever among the employes affected—can any longer be challenged if it has been in effect three months."

Curbs Swept Away

It declared this would permit sweeping away of all restrictions on closed shop contracts "by the simple device of keeping the contracts secret for the required 90 days.

"Thereafter, the most vicious and patently illegal contracts," the statement continued, "would be beyond the reach of any Federal agency, and employes would be utterly helpless, except by striking, to protect themselves from discharge or any other penalties if they refused to meet requirements of membership, initiation fees, work permits, dues or assessments. What such license would mean to professional labor organizers may be illustrated by the reported fact that in the Kaiser cases alone the annual revenue of a single A. F. of L. local union has reached some three million dollars a year."

Carlisle Bargeron, publicity representative of the A. F. of L. metal trades department, issued a statement saying "the board is not, as it claims, attempting to prevent any gigantic fraud or labor racketeering. The Kaiser yards have been operating for two years under contract with the A. F. of L. The board's sole purpose is, at this late date, to throw these contracts out and give the C. I. O. an opportunity to agitate and see if it can organize the workers."

According to police, the youth was carrying a companion, Mickey Farlin, 8, who could not swim, down the ladder, when he slipped, and fell into the water.

James Howard Bailey, 10, Negro, of 3221 Cherry Hill Northwest, was drowned while swimming in Rock Creek yesterday morning, 100 yards south of the K Street Bridge. Companions said the boy jumped into the water and did not come back to the top. His body was recovered by Harbor Policemen W. E. Davis and F. A. Carr. A physician from Emergency Hospital pronounced him dead.

Treated for heat prostrations were William Milton, 45, Negro, of 638 Acker Street Northeast, a laborer for the District Government. He was taken to Freedmen's Hospital but could not say where he collapsed.

Also treated was Willie Deck, 30, also a Negro, of 25 McCullough Court Northwest and William Hammer, no address listed, at Gallinger Hospital.

Some relief from the torrid heat of yesterday was promised for today by forecasters in the Weather Bureau who said it was anticipated cooler weather would be experienced.

Machinist Pact Is Canceled By Teamsters

The executive board of the teamsters' union of the American Federation of Labor cancelled yesterday a jurisdictional agreement it had maintained with the machinists' union for 23 years.

The machinists' union withdrew from the A. F. of L. last month. Teamster union officials said the agreement was predicted on both unions' being A. F. of L. members and that since the machinists had withdrawn from the A. F. of L., the agreement was at an end and the teamsters free to take in groups from the machinists' union.

Dan Tobin, teamsters' union president, said several groups of automobile mechanics already have applied for affiation with his union.

Lester Hunt, editor of the International Teamster, official publication of the teamsters' union, announced action of the executive board.

Harvey Brown, president of the machinists, appeared before the teamsters' board and requested extension of the mutual-aid pact, but the board refused.

A labor official commented last night should the teamsters start taking in groups of the auto mechanics now affiliated with machinists it might lead to "a hell of a fight."

leaders that no new individual and corporation taxes should be made retroactive to hit 1943 income.

The important thing he said, is to come as near as possible to the goal of meeting half the war costs with taxes.

Morgenthau said the Treasury, in its war-financing activities, would concentrate on a campaign to siphon off into war bonds 25 per cent of the people's total earnings during the last half of this year.

He explained that this did not mean that everyone will be expected to put 25 per cent of his income into war bonds.

"We are going to aim to get one-quarter of what the people earn in total," he said. "This means that some warworker, who may be getting $100 a week and has several members of his family working, that family can invest a quarter of their earnings as a family."

In the case of a white collar worker who hasn't enjoyed an increased wartime income, he said, "we can't expect it."

Allied Air Strategy, Tactics Superior to Axis

Secretary Stimson declared yesterday that the Allied high command has demonstrated its superiority over the Axis in handling air power.

Comparing the conquest of Pantelleria with the unsuccessful German and Italian attempts to destroy Malta from the air, the War Secretary said the latter attacks were sporadic and "the bombing was inaccurate."

"Just as our planes and pilots have excelled those of the Axis in aerial combat, so it now appears that our tactical and strategic employment of air power is also superior, Stimson asserted. "This is a development which holds great promise for the future."

The Secretary also added up the score sheet on the recent American daylight raids on Germany and concluded that while the American plane losses on some were unusually heavy, the results as a whole are "decidedly advantageous to us."

Thirty-two Flying Fortresses were lost on four raids over Germany, he disclosed, compared with at least 150 German fighters shot down and "very heavy" damage to Nazi arms centers.

In the raids on Wilhelmshaven and Cuxhaven June 11, 85 Axis fighters and possibly 105—were shotdown by our bombers, and eight of the American craft failed to return. On the June 13 raids on Kiel and Bremen, 65 Nazis were shot down and 24 United States bombers were lost. This is two less than announced originally, two of the Flying Forts returning later.

D'Alesandro Urges Gasoline Sales Quotas

With gasoline stocks in the country rapidly dropping, according to reports from the Bureau of Mines, Representative Thomas D'Alesandro (Democrat) of Maryland, urged that a sales quota for dealers, in addition to the present rationing system, be adopted.

D'Alesandro made his request in the form of a letter to the Petroleum Administrator for War, Interior Secretary Ickes. Similar communications were sent to Donald M. Nelson, head of the WPB and Prentiss M. Brown, head of the OPA.

He asserted that 10 per cent more gasoline was used in the Eastern area than was allotted to this section.

He said the reasons for this excessive use were black markets, counterfeit coupons, use of loose coupons than should have been allowed.

In the meantime, the Bureau of Mines reported that gasoline stocks were "rapidly approaching critical levels."

There were also indications that further restrictions were forthcoming for motorists in the mid-continent area before the summer is over, the Bureau of Mines showed.

The bureau said that withdrawals from reserve stocks in April had reached an all-time high of 5,500,000 barrels. The total consumption, civilian, military and export, was 51,600,000 barrels, several million barrels more than expected and only 1 per cent below that of a year ago.

Selective Service Will Examine D.C. Penal Inmates

Inmates of District penal institutions will be brought before a special Selective Service panel in preparation of their possible induction into the armed forces, Selective Service Director William E. Leahy announced yesterday.

Set up under regulations recently issued by National Selective Service, this panel will have jurisdiction over all inmates of the District Reformatory and District Workhouse at Lorton, Va., the District Jail and the National Training School for Boys, it was said.

Although declining to predict how many of the approximately 1000 men involved might be actually inducted, Leahy pointed out that the "number would be small because only those inmates who have been convicted of relatively minor crimes and have shown promise of becoming good citizens and good soldiers and sailors will be considered."

OPA Again to Ration Fuel Oil In D. C., 33 States This Winter

Fuel oil will be rationed again in the District of Columbia during the coming winter, as well as the same 33 States in which it was rationed last year, the local OPA announced yesterday.

At the same time the OPA issued a series of questions designed to give householders all the information relative to rationing that is needed; the questions and answers are:

Q. Why is it necessary to ration fuel oil?

A. In the first place, there is not enough oil to go all around for our fighting front and our home front without reducing consumption. And we all agree the reductions can and must be made on the home front. In the second place, facilities for transporting petroleum products, including fuel oil and kerosene, into these States remain insufficient despite new pipe lines, to provide for normal consumption. Direct military needs, off shore and on shore, have increased even more than our enormous expansion of pipeline facilities can provide for.

Q. When will the new ration certificates be issued?

A. Plans have been made to issue the new ration coupons during June to those who live at the same address as last year, so that they can begin filling up their tanks in July.

Q. Why so early?

A. Principally because dealers can give consumers better delivery service throughout the year if they can deliver in the summer. This will help them solve manpower and truck shortages in filling the consumers' tanks early and so add appreciably to the total storage capacity in the rationed area. War price and rationing boards will be very busy during the coming months, and consumers, to be assured that their applications will be taken care of promptly, must file them early. It is important that both dealers and the Government have immediately the information which applicants for renewals will provide, about the amount or kind of oil rationed that each consumer requires. This information tells dealers and the Government how much of each type of oil to bring into each neighborhood for the next year.

Q. How will the renewal be made?

A. The entire process will be by mail.

Q. What happens first?—A. Early in June local war price and rationing boards will begin mailing the simple renewal forms to every person who received a ration of fuel oil last year.

Q. When I get my form what should I do with it?—A. Fill it out and mail it back to the board.

Q. When?—A. Just as soon as possible, within two or three days.

Q. Does it take much time to fill out the renewal form?—A. No; there are only a few simple questions. They ask: 1, The applicant's name and address. 2, Address where ration will be used (if different than the applicant's). 3, Name of last year's applicant (if different than the present applicant); 4, Name of applicant's supplier and the kind of oil used.

Q. Is any signature required?—A. Yes, the applicant's.

Q. Will I be required to report any unused portion of my last year's ration, or turn in any unused coupons?

A. No. But you will be given opportunity in the application to state that you need less oil next year, and that you will, therefore, accept a specific number of gallons less than last year's basic ration.

Q. What will the board do when it receives my application?

A. Check it against the application filed last year for your dwelling, then issue you a new basic ration for the amount you received last year.

Q. Any exceptions?

A. If you live in a very small house, the board may make some upward adjustment to reduce severe cuts in last year's rations for some of those dwellings.

Q. Will boards in any instance reduce the new ration below last year's ration?

A. Not unless as an applicant you state that you are willing to accept less. Also in any case where the board finds an error in last year's ration which gave you more than you were entitled to, it will correct the error.

Q. We have a baby, born last month. Will this entitle me to a children's allowance next winter in addition to the basic ration?

A. Yes, but if there is already a child under 4 years of age in the family, the new baby will not entitle you to a second children's allowance.

Q. How do I apply for the extra children's allowance?

A. You may apply on a special form later in the summer or early in the fall. The time and procedure will be announced by OPA. In the meantime, you should apply for your basic ration on the simple renewal form if your address is the same as last winter.

Q. Because my aunt has come to live with us, we are opening another room. This means heating space in addition to that which I reported last year. Will I be entitled to a larger ration?

A. Yes. But you apply now only for the basic ration on the regular renewal form. Anyone who has had a change of circumstances entitling him to a larger ration may apply for the extra amount at a later date and according to procedure to be announced later.

Dr. Dunham, Pastor Here 32 Years, Dies

The Rev. Dr. J. Harvey Dunham, for 32 years pastor of the Western Presbyterian Church, died yesterday at his home, 4924 Tilden Street Northwest.

REV. DUNHAM

A descendant of early colonial settlers, he was born in Cambridge, N. Y., the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Norton Dunham. He was graduated from Cambridge High School, Union College, Schenectady, N. Y., and Princeton Theological Seminary, Princeton, N. J.

He held pastorates in Chesterton, N. Y.; Fort Edward, N. Y., and for two years was associate pastor at the Westminster Presbyterian Church, Minneapolis, Minn., from which pastorate he came here.

Dr. Dunham was honored in December, 1939, upon completion of 30 years' service at Western Presbyterian Church.

At that time, Dr. Halley B. Taylor, moderator of the Washington City Presbytery, said no man in the Presbytery was held in higher esteem by brother ministers than Dr. Dunham. His elevation at one time to be moderator here and in Baltimore attested to that esteem, Dr. Taylor said.

Dr. Dunham served as a chaplain during the first World War. He was a member of Hiram Lodge No. 10, F. A. A. M., R. A. M., Washington Commandery No. 1—K. T., the West End Citizens Association, and XI chaper of Phi Gamma Delta.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lena C. Dunham; one son, Raymond H. Dunham, and a sister, Mrs. D. L. Wood, Albany, N. Y.

Funeral services will be held at the Western Presbyterian Church at 2 p. m. tomorrow. The Rev. Dr. John Palmer and the Rev. Charles Stewart McKenzie will officiate. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

New York Nazi Guilty of Aid To Saboteurs

New York, June 17.—Helmut Leiner, 34-year-old (Astoria) Long Island gardener charged with aiding a group of Nazi saboteurs who landed in Florida from a submarine a year ago, pleaded guilty in Federal Court today.

Tried last fall for treason, he was acquitted by direction of the court.

Leiner, a member of the Nazi Party here and in Germany, interrupted his trial on three charges of trading with the enemy, to enter his plea. Judge Edward A. Conger will impose sentence June 25. The prisoner faces a maximum of 30 years' imprisonment and fines totaling $30,000.

His plea of guilty was to an indictment charging he changed two $50 bills for Edward John Kerling, leader of the saboteurs, when he knew that Kerling had landed in this country from a submarine and was on a mission of destruction for the Nazis.

A Government witness during the two days of trial was a member of the Nazi landing party, Ernest Peter Berger. Berger was one of two men who escaped execution after a trial before a Washington, D. C., military court. Six others died.

Prices for these concerts, which will run in two Saturday and Sunday series from June 26 through August 22, are 55 cents, $1.10 and $1.65.

Season tickets for each of the series are still available, however, and purchasers will have advantage of obtaining all-season seats in the best locations for concerts by such outstanding artists as Albert Spalding, Carlos Salzedo and his harp ensemble, American Ballad Singers, Conrad Thibault and others who will entertain music-loving Washingtonians this summer in the cool acres of Meridian Hill Park.

For those unable to purchase their tickets in sufficient time before the concerts, sales will continue at the park box office before each performance. In the event of rain on a concert night, ticket holders may use them for the special concert which will be given in such emergencies. Thus, if a Saturday performance is rained out, tickets are good for the same program which will be played the following Monday evening.

Radar principles were first applied to aviation by RCA through equipment built and installed in its own plane in 1937, in connection with a study of collision prevention.

In 1938, RCA built an experimental Radar installation for the U. S. Navy. As the result of tests, in October, 1939 the Navy placed with RCA its first order for service Radar equipment. Since then, vast strides in the development of Radar in RCA Laboratories have been made available to all branches of the industry producing Radar.

Radar is another achievement of the radio-electron tube and the use of ultra-high frequency waves, pioneered by RCA Laboratories. RCA looks forward to the time when its services as world headquarters for radio-electronic research can again be devoted to making the peacetime world a better place in which to live.

FIRE
giver of life

Until Man learned to make fire and use it, there was no Civilization. And, to the men of the armed forces of our country and the United Nations, fighting to preserve our ideals of Civilization, there are moments when fire is life, itself.

Look! Huddled together in the thick jungle is a group of Allied soldiers, told to "hold out" at all costs. Rain comes down thick as rope. Every twig and every leaf drips water that chills them to the bone.

But wait! From his pocket, one of them takes a small can, and from it a cube, about twice as big as a lump of sugar—solidified fuel. He touches a match to it, and it bursts into a fierce flame.

As some of the men warm their hands over the flame, another soldier places a pan of water over it, on a frame stove, and soon the water is boiling. Now a few tea leaves, and in a few moments they have a bracing, refreshing hot drink. Meanwhile, another man has started a second fire, and is cooking some solid food for them.

All of us at Coty, both in America and Britain, are proud of the opportunity given our London laboratories to make this solidified fuel, for this is a task of aiding in the comfort and morale of our fighting men, and even of helping save their lives. In this work we have been aided greatly by the research of our laboratories in Rio de Janeiro, Mexico City and other branches of our far-flung organization.

We believe it is especially fitting that a world-wide organization like Coty should bend its energies to this work. From the sisters and wives and mothers of our fighting men have come the progress and prosperity of our companies.

What better, then, that we should dedicate ourselves to do all we can to help save the lives of their loved ones!

Pulling Together

Aside from the impressive showing of strength behind the District delegate bill at the hearing on Wednesday, there was evidence that civic Washington has learned a lesson of profound significance. Not one voice was raised against the bill when Representative Celler of the subcommittee conducting the hearing asked if there was any opposition. One witness tried to convince the subcommittee that arrangements could be made to have voteless Washingtonians cast ballots in Maryland. But there was no specific objection by anyone to the election of a delegate to be a spokesman for local residents in the halls of Congress.

On the affirmative side was an impressive array of testimony from most of the civic organizations of the city. That remarkable unity cannot fail to influence Congress. It does not mean wholly unanimous approval of the Walter bill, but it does indicate a willingness on the part of a dissenting minority to withhold opposition for the sake of harmony in seeking this and other important reforms. That is a decision of the greatest significance. Washingtonians sponsoring different methods of bringing this community once more within the circle of democracy cannot afford to fight each other. All are striving for the same ultimate goal. If they have now really learned to pull together, subordinating differences as to approach and timing, a truly remarkable step toward regeneration of the American system in our own Capital has been taken.

Pennywise Economy

Among the budget requests rigorously pruned by an economy-minded House Appropriations Committee is the sum sought for the Office of Civilian Defense. The $5,746,522 asked by this agency was cut to a flat four million dollars. When a congressional committee, after a necessarily hurried study, arrives at a recommendation of this sort, one cannot help wondering if it represents a real appraisal of the agency's needs or merely a nice, round, convenient figure.

In this case, the curtailment effects the virtual elimination of one important phase of OCD activities. It is not likely that any impairment of a serious nature will be permitted in OCD's air-raid protective services. These are an essential form of insurance against the possibility of an enemy bombing attack on our shores. The budget reduction recommended by the Appropriations Committee can be met therefore only by a liquidation of the equally important and useful Civilian Services Corps. Its work, though not as dramatic as that of the Civilian Defense Corps, is of no less direct service in the war effort.

The Civilian Services Corps has now enlisted the energies of more than four million American men and women, on a wholly voluntary basis, for participation in war work. They have given a hand in the harvesting and processing of crops; they have taught fellow citizens how to care for victory gardens, how to conserve food and still provide nutritious meals; how to manage rationing points; they have organized car pools and managed centers for the care of the children of mothers engaged in war jobs; they have served as nurses' aides, as canteen hostesses, as substitute school teachers or librarians, as employment aides; they have collected rubber and scrap metal and tin cans and silk stockings; they have distributed posters and conducted housing surveys. The list of tough and important jobs which they have done—jobs which needed and still need doing—could be extended indefinitely.

To dissolve this army of volunteers now would be to deal a cruel and stupid blow to their pride and their morale. And it would be to destroy a developing community spirit which has been one of the healthiest and most heartening by-products of our war mobilization. Through the need for such work, and under the supervision of the national OCD, men and women in all walks of American life have been brought together in common undertakings which have enriched their understanding of one another. They have learned the real meaning of national unity. And they have been given satisfaction for a deep urge within themselves—the urge to take a direct part in the national cause.

For the coordination of all this voluntary work, OCD's Washington and field staff numbers only 300 individuals. The cost involved is less than two million dollars—about the sum which the Appropriations Committee has pruned. It is negligible in comparison with the dollar value of the voluntary services which have been rendered. This newspaper has always been strong in its support of genuine economy measures. It should be borne in mind, however, that economy cannot be reckoned exclusively in dollar terms.

Pie In The Sky

Maybe it is only a case of hot-weather madness or Washingtonitis, a disease which causes the victim to thresh the air violently while accomplishing nothing, but in any event the Senate is entitled to public sympathy for having vigorously slapped itself in the face. The occasion, of course, was the adoption of the McKellar bill. That patronage grab has about as much chance of survival as an ice cube at the intersection of Fourteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue. If it is not smothered by the House, it will be ground underfoot by the President. Yet the Senate went stolidly through the motions of passing this outrageous measure as if it were impelled by some strange impulse toward self-flagellation.

The Senate might easily have turned Mr. McKellar's assault upon the war program into a rational bill requiring the confirmation of all policy-making officials. Far too many officials exercising vast powers over the people are now appointed, as we have pointed out before, without any independent check upon the President's discretion. But the Senate passed up this opportunity. It accepted the hodgepodge bill reported out by its Judiciary Committee. Instead of limiting Senate confirmation to policy-making officials, that political whirlwind sweeps every job paying more than $4500, and some paying less, into the patronage grab bag. It is thus a vicious political assault upon the war agencies as well as the old-line Government establishments.

What seems particularly inexcusable is that Administration stalwarts took the lead in pushing this indefensible measure. Fortunately, most of the Republicans in the Senate had the good judgment to vote against the bill. They must be equally as disgusted as are the Democrats with the loose personnel policies that the Administration is following. But they didn't make the colossal blunder of supposing that the Senate can pass judgment upon the qualifications of 27,000 Federal employes and attend to its regular business of legislating for a great Nation at war. For that matter, we cannot believe that the sponsors of the bill actually regard the Senate as a competent civil service commission. Senator Hill probably hit the nail on the head when he pictured his colleagues as being swept away by their appetite for "pap, pie and patronage."

Still the question remains as to why the Senate should make such an exhibition of its weakness in time of great national emergency when the chance of getting away with its trick seem to be nil and the outburst of public indignation is certain to be great. We do not pretend to know the answer. But we do believe that it is something for sober reflection on the part of the Senate. For democracy is not so strong in any part of the world today that legislative bodies can afford to bring contempt upon their own heads by reaching out for spoils which, even if they could be reached, would turn sour and corrupt within the hand.

Escapist Plan

Congressional critics of the Administration's plan for holding down living costs by means of subsidies have uncovered the dangerous weaknesses of relying heavily upon Treasury handouts to offset rising production costs and, in effect, to subsidize consumers by permitting them to obtain goods for less than cost prices. The present issue is not whether to subsidize at all, but how far to rely upon subsidies in enabling the OPA to hold the price line steady. The OPA is already committed to price rollbacks in most meats, butter and coffee. Even these limited subsidies will cost a lot of money, while the relief to consumers will be extremely slight.

In his recent discussion of food problems the President appeared to favor liberal use of subsidies to relieve the "squeeze" on producers when ceiling prices are not high enough to cover production costs. As The Post has frequently pointed out, the payment of subsidies to high-cost marginal producers to induce them to increase their output is sometimes justified as an alternative to raising ceiling prices for all classes of producers. But to employ subsidies on an extensive scale to bolster up a basically defective system of price control would necessitate expenditures of astronomical size. Moreover, the public could not be long deceived into assuming that living costs had been stabilized and inflation conquered, with large-scale subsidy payments steadily adding to the volume of inflationary purchasing power and increasing the pressure on price ceilings.

To repeat: Subsidies can be used to good effect, on a limited scale, to restrain advances in living costs, provided the price-control system is really functioning well. Unfortunately, the conditions essential to successful operation are at present conspicuous by their absence. Wages are still advancing without offsetting additions to taxes, and farm prices have not been subjected to adequate controls. As a result, production costs of food and other necessities have been steadily rising. To resort to subsidies under such conditions as a means of avoiding increases in retail prices is to work a fraud upon the public. Moreover, it is a fraud that can only delay, not avert, an ultimate disillusioning showdown.

It is up to Congress to stop talking and dictate a program that will allow the Administration some leeway in payment of subsidies and at the same time prevent subsidies from being used merely to cover up the inadequacies of the existing price-control system. Some congressional critics of subsidies are open to suspicion of opposing food subsidies because they favor further advances in farm prices. Fortunately there are other clear-headed critics who are prepared to take a reasonable middle ground. Senator Taft, for example, is said to favor payment of subsidies to equalize food transportation costs thrown out of balance by the war, and to encourage mining of strategic metals. He is also willing to appropriate a half billion dollars to finance the already announced rollback program. He thinks, however—and rightly—that no more rollback programs should be authorized without the specific approval of Congress. If Congress can be induced to vote for this or some similar sensible compromise plan, the discussion provoked by the President's impetuous advocacy of subsidies will have served a good purpose, if it ends now.

Irked Bureaucrat

From Congress there has come enough support of newspaper coverage of this war to dispense with the need by the newspapers themselves to put up a defense against Mr. Davis' strictures in Boston. Mr. Davis spoke before the annual convention of the American Newspaper Guild. As we read the speech, he probably had in mind a few newspapers whose domestic animosities are so deep seated that they are giving more aid to the enemy than to the American cause. But in his failure to particularize, Mr. Davis let his chips fall upon the entire American press.

"In the country at large, or at least in the pages of the country's newspapers," he said, "Washington bureaucrat" is a term of abuse, and Washington has become a synonym for "muddle, confusion, and bickering." He went on to suggest that it was unwise in wartime to impair public confidence in bureaucracy in general. The implication here is that the reporting of the Washington scene has been a drag on the war effort. This is strengthened by the fulsome praise which the OWI director bestowed on the reporting of our military operations. The reader is left with the impression that the "muddle, confusion, and bickering" is a figment of the journalistic imagination.

Mr. Davis' is the second lamentation of this nature within the last month which has come from a responsible Government spokesman. The Attorney General several weeks ago protested at Charlottesville against attacks on our bureaucracy as harmful to the war effort. At the time this newspaper was asking where he was. For right in his own department there was a ripe example of the kind of thing that invites the excoriation which he deplored. We refer, of course, to Mr. Biddle's failure to institute grand jury proceedings against Representative Cox. As for Mr. Davis, his department likewise has been under fire, for sins of commission as well as omission. The criticism has doubtless got under the skin of the head of an organization anxious to direct as well as collect the news and comment about our war Capital, as when he suggested that De Gaulle would welcome Peyrouton in Algeria. All this doubtless has impaired OWI's prestige. But the fault is certainly not that of the newspaper press. We dare say that the record of OWI has fortified the public preference for newspaper accounts of the handling or mishandling of Government problems rather than those obtainable in Government handouts. As for ourselves, we prefer the Truman Committee's accounts of the facts of the war effort to the OWI's, though the Truman Committee to date has cost the taxpayer a mere $150,000, while the (reduced) budget of OWI calls for $34,472,504, or about twice as much as our entire Congress costs.

To be sure, the American press, like any other institution, is by no means perfect. In some spots it is vexatious, in others, vicious. But, if it errs in the reporting of the Washington scene, it errs, we submit, on the side of generosity. The "muddle, confusion, and bickering," in other words, is more than is represented. There is no need to go into history to prove it, though almost every agency, including the OWI, is rich with proof. Examples of "muddle, confusion, and bickering," alas, are always current. Those three horsemen of the Washington scene would stride across any story that the OWI scribes could write, for example, about the handling of the coal dispute and of the canning holdup, if they dedicated themselves to their own strategy of truth creed.

Even the President has admitted that the Capital lags behind the country at large in its war organization. It is in keeping with the strategy of truth that the press should report the scene as it is, and fulfill a gadfly role. Only in so doing will there be any improvement. If it had not been for such reporting and such criticism, for instance, there would probably have been no OWM today. Mr. Davis' irritation and Mr. Biddle's and the President's explain why every dictator as his first act muzzles the press: Then there is plain sailing for "muddle, confusion, and bickering," and worse.

Food Subsidy

By Mark Sullivan

Complexities

GRANT THAT many of the difficulties in this wartime food situation are inherent—they would bedevil any Administration or any official. Grant that others are equally unescapable, especially the conflict of interests affected—farmers, labor, retailers, manufacturers trade associations. Grant all that, and then try to say whether the solution is the subsidy which President Roosevelt proposes and which most of Congress resists. To that question almost the only answer you will get in Washington will be as hot as the weather. Either the subsidy is absolutely right or the subsidy is absolutely wrong.

All that the present article attempts is to clarify the working of the subsidy system. To the average citizen it looks simple. The Administration "rolls back" the price of butter 5 cents a pound. Thereupon the housewife buys butter for 41 cents instead of 46 (or some such figures, depending on regional and other factors). Then the Administration compensates the manufacturer of butter by paying him a subsidy out of the Federal Treasury.

BUT TO understand the complexities, observe how the method works on other foods, canned vegetables, for example. The Administration last week fixed the price at which canners must sell canned vegetables. But already, last January, the Administration had fixed another price — the price which canners must pay to farmers for raw vegetables. Thus, on the surface, we have a price-fixer's dream—a fixed price to be paid farmers for their vegetables, a fixed price at which canned vegetables are to be sold.

But turn now to the canner. He is caught between a fixed price ceiling and a fixed price floor. He says to the Administration, in effect: "I just can't do it. I can't make canned goods and sell them at the price you have fixed; my cost of labor is too great. Labor is demanding higher wages, and the higher wages must be paid if the canning is to be done. If you hold me to this I'll just have to go out of business and the vegetables will rot in the fields."

To this the Administration replied this week, in effect: "Sure, we can't expect you to do business at a loss. Just go ahead, pay whatever wage increases the War Labor Board approves; later on we'll figure out your additional labor cost and compensate you with a subsidy."

ONE ASPECT of the case of canned goods is that it shows who is the beneficiary of the subsidy. In this case certainly, it is labor—the subsidy pays the additional wages received by labor. This increases the irritation of farm leaders in Congress. The farmer does not get the subsidy—though in fact it is often said the farmer gets the benefit of the subsidy, and the saying of this irritates the farmer still more. It can be said that the farmer gets the benefit in one sense—that if there were no subsidy, he might be forced to take a lower price for his crops. But this negative benefit does not impress farm leaders. On the contrary, they think the subsidy system is another illustration that labor is favored by the Administration.

In one case now boiling, the farmer has been definitely hurt by the subsidy system, hurt in dollars and cents. The Administration announced a rollback of 1 to 2 cents a pound on meats. At once there was a psychological effect on the price of cattle and hogs sold by farmers. It was realized that the rollback could not be taken out of labor in the packing houses—its wages are fixed and no one dreams they would be reduced. So, in the psychology of the markets, the rollback was taken out of the price paid farmers for cattle and hogs—there was a drop of a cent or so a pound.

True, in this as in all rollbacks, the Administration said that the amount would be taken care of by a subsidy. But the market-wise in the stockyards knew that much of Congress opposes subsidies, and hence might not appropriate the money to pay them.

When the farmer, right now, this week, sees a drop in the price he receives for cattle and hogs, he is not apt to raise more of them. This, with other factors, accounts for the prediction of a famine in meats later on. The subsidy system as now begun, whatever may be said for it, certainly does not stimulate production by the farmer. And increased production of foodstuffs is desperately needed.

What is said here touches only one aspect of the whole farm and food situation. The whole of it is extremely complex and extremely confusing.

Pantelleria Falls

By Paul Schubert

Nature Of Our Victory

The fall of Pantelleria was another milestone of war. This war has seen many such milestones, but none more momentous than that so eloquently recorded in the photograph of Pantelleria airdrome marked by the white cross of surrender. The battered airdrome, hazy under the dust of long assault, hints at the terrible destruction of the repeated bombings which reduced this stronghold. The fact that Lampedusa and Linosa followed suit emphasizes the milestone nature of the victory.

Our airmen are elated over the conquest of Pantelleria—elated as airmen because air power furnished the greater part of the conquering force, elated as Americans because American aircraft were prominent in the job. Beyond that, elated as soldiers because this is a victory of the kind that soldiers dream about—a victory in which a smaller number of men, suffering only slight loss in casualties to themselves, vanquished numerically superior force.

COMING AT this moment, the conquest of Pantelleria is a happy promise that we shall be able to do the much bigger job in front of us—a job in which we shall be almost always numerically inferior.

At Pantelleria, enemy forces totaling "over 10,000 men"—estimated by some observers to be as many as 15,000 — surrendered without combat to an occupation force probably not much more than a quarter as strong in numbers. The Pantelleria position was heavily fortified, in a conventional sense. By the use of conventional warfare we should have been forced to mass both overwhelming naval strength for the gun bombardment of the island and to land superior numbers of troops—i. e., to "invade" the island. Of all war's operations, the invasion of a hostile shore is usually accomplished only at the price of heaviest sacrifice in blood and death.

Earlier in the war, the Germans accomplished an invasion in which a numerically inferior force won the island of Crete. This, too, was called a milestone of war.

At Crete the invading force accomplished its job largely by a combination of surprise and novel tactics. Coming in by air-transport, landing by parachute, glider and crash-landed plane, the invaders leaped right over the coast which was the traditional invasion barrier—they captured airdromes (inland "harbors") and gained favorable strategic position, and then went on to win the island in battle against its British and Greek defenders.

MILESTONE THOUGH it was, Crete was merely an extension of older methods of invasion. At Crete the novelty was one of transport—the battle for the island remained a fight between men on the ground; it cost the Germans considerable casualties; disparity in numbers was not extraordinary—and with a slight change in the "breaks," the battle might equally well have gone the other way. The novelty of Pantelleria, on the other hand, is the fact that conquest was achieved by concentrated air bombardment, carried out over a period of several days at a minimal loss in human casualties (thanks to overwhelming air superiority). The bombardment was supplemented by naval bombardment (whose results were much admired by the airmen) and by naval "blockade" of the island.

The bombardment of Pantelleria, though it cost little in human life, cost considerable in time and considerable in money. In terms of cash, it was probably one of the most expensive attacks in history, for it cost not only thousands of tons of explosive (delivered overseas from the point of manufacture) but also the use of hundreds of heavy and very expensive aircraft, plus the ground establishment necessary to put aircraft into the air.

WHEN YOU come to adding up the manpower behind the front of this Pantelleria attack, it is probably quite wrong to say that Pantelleria succumbed to "inferior" numbers of men.

But of course there was manpower behind the enemy front, too, and so it is perhaps best to stick to the yardstick of "combat" manpower—the numbers of men actually opposed to each other at the mid-Mediterranean island . . . and to say that thanks to the aerial bombardment, the soldier's dream was realized. A strongly fortified, stoutly defended place, was decisively captured by an inferior number of men without hand to hand, man to man battle. This is the "economy" of warfare that appeals to the soldier.

When Hitler began the European war, it seemed that he alone had the secret of winning great victories with inferior numbers.

This year, backing our manpower with unprecedented quantities of mechanical-explosive destructive force, we are embarking upon a great attack, of which Pantelleria is the first blow.

John L. Lewis

American unions have come a long way since the day of the Chicago massacre, yet when the union appears to have gained stature as a reputable organization, you toss it away without a thought as to the consequence either to your Government, its people or yourself. We who are out here have little in the way of comforts because of supplies and conditions. Our material strength is absolutely necessity for immediate victory. However, for the mighty dollar you wish to toss our chances away. We get no raise, but those dependent on us have to live through the same standard of living as you. Yet for a strike you throw out the whole future of labor and all freedoms.

We realize how hard it is to have income taxes and long days of work. Without hesitating there is beer when you want it, cigarettes at the corner and good entertainment now and then. We realize and feel sorry for the deep struggle that you have to endure. It is easy to be bombed, and hear of your buddies strafed with machine-gun fire. This is all well and good. We here can take it, can you at home bear up with us?

You have given your answer. Shall we accept it as final? Shall all our cause be thrown away because of the petty bickering between labor and capital? You are striking and we are fighting——. Our enemies are drinking to it tonight and calling it a major victory of the war. All of us here believe in labor and are looking forward to it on our return. Yet you want to betray us. The right to strike may be all well and good. But is it greater than immediate victory over our enemy. The soldier has to compromise, can you?

So for the price of our Nation with freedom and democracy in the balance there must be an easier way to settle your differences, at least until after we can assure you of complete victory and that can't be done without your help. . . .

Dogs Defended

Mr. Chapin, who wrote in your columns defending the "patriotic citizen" who was fined for trapping a dog, makes statements that lovers of dogs cannot accept. He thinks dogs "serve no useful purpose in cities." It is evident that to him the only useful purpose of anything is moneymaking. The companionship and devotion of a dog cannot be measured in dollars and cents. They are needed in cities just as much as elsewhere. Many lonely people live in cities. But it is not only lonely people, invalids and aged who need and desire the companionship of dogs. A person's relatives and friends may desert him in a time of misfortune, but his dog always remains faithful, willing to sacrifice his life for his master. A child's education is not complete until he has had a pet of his own and has been taught how to love and care for it.

Mr. Chapin also says that "to appeal to the owner of a dog to restrain the animal is everywhere and always futile." While there are some irresponsible owners, many others gladly restrain their dog if told that it is annoying someone. I have done so, even though I felt my dog was not guilty, and furthermore, I would gladly pay for any damages caused by my dog. FRANCES A. GRAVES.

From Africa

The following letter received this morning from my son, Pvt. First Class Robert W. Lee, stationed in North Africa:

"Lately I have had an opportunity to see the difference between the English temperament and other national temperaments under stress. Someone once remarked that the English never hurry whether in advance or in retreat. Certainly it is true that under the most severe conditions they appear absolutely unruffled. This is one of the reasons why the Germans will never beat them.

"Recently I went to an American cemetery, and I was surprised to see how many crosses there were that bore no names. And here is something certain un-American elements should know, namely, that there was a liberal sprinkling of graves bearing the five-star symbol instead of the cross." (Signed) "BOB."

Honorary Degrees For 1943

Dudley Chiggle, citizen extraordinary and man of remarkable restraint: Throughout the past year and a half you had your share of misgivings, doubts and apprehensions regarding the war effort; you often turned a back somersault in the privacy of your own home because of some particularly exasperating example of bureaucratic fumbling, but at no time did you sound off in public on the futility of the Government, write a letter to a newspaper or begin a dinner conversation with "The trouble with this country is . . ." Help yourself to any honorary degree on the campus and take a good 15-cent cigar!

Sylvanius Hooksey, public servant of parts and man of action: You were named to a position as head of a Federal bureau; you took one look at a single day's production of superfluous printing, made a casual inspection of the amount of bilge contained therein, and, without hesitation, threw the junk into the ash can and gave everybody fair warning that if they didn't cut it out at once you'd publicly denounce 'em. Take a sheepskin and have a beer as you go out.

* * * *

Hilary Plunkett, a remarkable gentleman of a very rare type: Your Government asked you to cut out cuffs on your pants, do without a rest, go easy on porterhouse steaks, save tincans, raise a Victory garden and lay up your car. You obeyed to the letter at once, with no chiseling at any point. What is more, you didn't squawk at every opportunity and at no time were you heard to cry, "I wouldn't mind it if there was any sense to it." In addition to a degree we want you to stay and have some hot dogs and coffee.

* * * *

Prentiss Mulch, man of the hour and fellow of unusual capabilities: You have held a high Government job having to do with the regulation of the lives and habits of the American people. With one or two exceptions all your decisions were reached after careful consultation with the best available minds; you accepted the suggestions of trained experts and all your orders to the public were made in such short, clearly written form that they could be understood. We have allotted six hand-painted degrees to you, and could you use a bottle of catsup?

* * * *

Octavius Zippey, taxpayer, pinochle player and radio fan: The other day you heard the one thousandth inane jingle sung by cracked voices as a radio commercial. You immediately broke up the radio set with a hatchet, grabbed your hat, rushed to the broadcasting studio and shot everybody concerned. It was highly illegal, but mighty nice, Zippey, old boy. No degree is too good for you.

* * * *

Mrs. Minerva Cackle, mother, and housewife: You haven't a can of anything in the cellar beyond your immediate needs, and when it recently appeared in the newspapers that bison were getting scarce, you did not try to obtain a few for hoarding. Furthermore, you really are going easy on the butter. Would you rather have a degree or a pound of hamburger?

Axis Prisoner Song

A little trip, a little camp,
A little work, some chance for smiling;
A little rest, a little hope,
A little peace . . . and no more heiling!

Mayor LaGuardia of New York urges women to become fire fighters. In between her Red Cross work, nurses' aid meetings, airplane spotting, war plant endeavors and those activities in uniform any woman should find time to run to fires and shinny up a ladder with ax and hose. The housework can wait.

Civil Service

We older married women are handed out the hard work but it is the pretty younger girls who get the raises; most of them, it is true, are on very temporary work, but you can just bet your boots that when the war is over they will have the jobs and we will gradually have to be cut off. How can we widows who have children to support who have to divide our salaries and have to scrub and clean house after work, stand in line for hours at the groceries, hope to get the raises we deserve after years of toil when some sweet thing, who never has to do a thing at home but fix her nails, smiles at the boss? Those smiles get the raises from the bosses, both men and women. We widows are too tired to smile. The long war hours have worn us down. How can one who has to scrimp and save compete with the fresh young thing whose mother even presses her dresses, and who has all her salary to spend on her clothes?

People say we widows have sour looks and become disgruntled. Who would not be disgruntled when we have worked so hard to get raises, only to see them go time after time to young girls whom we have had to teach the work but who are soon put over us as supervisors, because unless they can say they supervise, even Civil Service might kick about their high salaries?

Strategic Bombing

By Ernest K. Lindley

Official Statement On Air Power

LINDLEY

THE CASE for air power caught the imagination of the public long before it began to make solid imprint on the thinking of the older branches of the armed services. It has been stated sometimes in terms which are exaggerated as applied to the present, although perhaps not out of line with the potentialities of air power 5, 10, or 20 years hence.

But it looks now as if the evangels of air power were to be given a chance to prove their theories—against Germany and, possibly, after the seizure of some of the Mediterranean islands, against Italy. How much time they will be allowed for the experiment is a secret of the chiefs of staff. This decision may not even have been reached yet; or, if reached, may be subject to revision as American and British heavy bomber commands demonstrate whether they can come up to their expectations.

It is important, therefore, to understand what the professional advocates and custodians of air power think they can accomplish. An excellent outline of the American theory (which differs in some respects from the British, with which it is being interlocked in round-the-clock bombings of Germany) was presented Wednesday by Brig. Gen. Edgar P. Sorensen, assistant chief of Air Staff for Intelligence, in an address to the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

General Sorensen does not belittle the value of using military planes in close coordination with ground forces. He cites the North African campaign, the one from the east as well as the one from the west, as "classic examples of the use of fighters and bombers in direct support of ground forces." This support reached its grand climax in the final drive in Tunisia, when bomber and fighter planes drove a channel right through the Axis lines, through which the ground forces (in this case the British First Army and part of the Eighth joined to it) advanced without serious difficulty.

But, General Sorensen thinks, strategic bombing also played a vital part, both in Montgomery's advance to Tunisia and in the final Allied victory. The pounding of the Axis communication lines—the Mediterranean ports, both European and African, and shipping and air transport services—had gradually weakened the enemy. When the final shocks were delivered, "the German defense disintegrated as from interior decay."

Now, the great objective of strategic bombing of Germany itself is to induce this interior decay. The failure of Germany to subdue Britain by air in 1940-41 has been offered as proof of the futility of strategic bombing. General Sorensen says this is because the Germans had not grasped the full potentialities of air power and therefore did not plan correctly this part of their conquest. The Germans contemplated the use of airplanes for only three basic purposes: (1) to attack enemy surface forces at and near the battle lines (2) to transport men and equipment, and (3) to defend their own forces and territory against air operations by the enemy.

IN THEIR attacks on Poland, Norway, Holland and France, the Germans used the "blitz" technique — military aviation as a spearhead and support for rapid land invasion. They had no specially developed bombers or tactics for the air attack on Britain. They improvised it from their tactical air forces designed for other purposes. Moreover, they did not proceed methodically to destroy British industry. Instead, they tried to break British morale.

The American theory of strategic bombing is altogether different from a blitz. It envisages a carefully planned "internal blockade" of the enemy, developing in four stages:

(1) The reduction of the enemy's air defense power, by hitting his aircraft factories, his flying fields, and knocking down his fighters. Other targets will be hit, but the first penetrations into enemy territory will be shallow.

(2) As we begin to get the edge over the enemy's production of airplanes for defense, we drive farther into his territory.

(3) We really "get down to the business of knocking the heart out of enemy production capacity." We do this by precision bombing of critical industrial and transportation units.

(4) Having completed the initial destruction of the selected vitals of the enemy, we clean up items overlooked or repaired.

During the first two stages, the enemy's power to defend himself on land will not be materially affected. At some point in the third stage, it will begin to be seriously and progressively affected.

This theory of strategic bombing does not contemplate a collapse of the enemy's morale. That may come about. But the purpose of the precision bombing is to sap his military strength behind the lines.

General Sorensen says that bombing cannot completely eliminate the necessity for occupation and final subjugation by the land forces. Even if the theory of strategic bombing works perfectly, the invading land forces must expect casualities. The invasion, he says, should start when "to delay longer would waste effort, but when its cost has been reduced to a minimum.

King Inspects Fleet Units

Praises American Chow

By Relman Morin

Representing the Combined U.S. Press

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, June 16 (Delayed), (AP).—Having visited the American Army in training for invasion of Europe and sampled American field rations on the first two days of his North African tour, King George of England got around yesterday (Tuesday) to inspecting units of the combined British and American Fleet in the Mediterranean and meeting the war correspondents who covered the rout of the Axis in this theater.

For more than an hour the British monarch, who flew to North Africa on Saturday, walked slowly up and down a vast space covered with detachments of sailors and marines. They were drawn up in long lines that stretched all the way from the city's warehouses down to the water front.

Accompanying the King as he inspected the fighting men were two American officers, Vice Admiral H. K. Hewitt and Rear Admiral J. L. Hall.

The King then went aboard a large American warship and reviewed the personnel, after which he entered the captain's cabin with some of the ship's officers for a 10-minute breather.

From there he went to a British warship, where more than 30 American and British correspondents were drawn up to meet him.

Each correspondent introduced himself, and from time to time as the King walked down the line of newsmen his face lighted up and he exclaimed: "I know your name very well. I have read many of your dispatches."

Leaving headquarters on Monday morning, the King spent nearly a full day with an American Army where he met Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark, commanding general of the U. S. Fifth Army, Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., commander of American combat forces in Tunisia; Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, commander of the United States Second Army Corps; Maj. Gen. Geoffrey Keys, commanding an armored unit; Maj. Gen. Manton S. Eddy and Maj. Gen. Hugh Gaffey.

As he reviewed one particular group of American troops, the King remarked to Maj. James D. Johnston of Barium Springs, N. C., commander of the King's guard, that the men's uniforms looked unusually clean. He asked how they were able to do it amid the dust and dirt which was inevitable in all North African camps.

Johnston replied promptly: "With lots of soap and plenty of elbow grease, Your Majesty."

The King asked if these units had suffered very heavy casualties in the Tunisian fighting. He said he had visited a convalescent camp the previous day and seen himself what good care the wounded were getting.

Places Wreath

The King then placed a wreath at the base of a flagstaff in the American cemetery.

It was another big day for Sergt. Frazier Woodard of Alabama, Ga., who supervised the cooks that prepared the luncheon for President Roosevelt when he was in Africa. The Army cooks won the President's praise and the King was no less outspoken in his praise.

Aiding Woodward were James R. Knox of Pittsburgh, Pa.; W. J. Cabbagestalk of Dalzell, S. C.; Pfc. James Nelson of Fort Pierce, Fla., and Pvt. Gilbert Lattimore of High Point, N. C.

Under Woodard's direction they prepared a luncheon that combined some of the best features of Southern cooking and British menus. The main course was roast beef that would have done credit to the best Piccadilly chef. Then came creamed corn, string beans, canned fruit salad and hot biscuits that were light as cotton balls. Tea was served instead of coffee.

After luncheon American combat teams gave a demonstration of street fighting and others went through special training exercises. The men went at it so hard one of the officers asked if they were putting extra verve into their work because of the King's presence.

The officer replied: "No, sir, that's the way they always do it. They know they're pretty hot teams and they like to prove it every time they get a chance."

The King's chauffeur during the tour was a Brtiish army sergeant—but he is an American from Bridgeport, Conn., He is Sergt. J. A. Wells who enlisted in the British forces in 1916 and "has been in and out of the British army ever since." The sergeant said he often thought of transferring to the American forces "but I might not get quite such a good job so I guess I'd better stay where I am."

King at Gibraltar

New York, June 17 (INS).—King George of England arrived at Gibraltar from North Africa this afternoon, the British radio announced.

The broadcast, recorded by the FCC, said "He will inspect the fortifications there and be present at army and air force training exercises."

The Gallup Poll

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., June 17.—Americans have strong opinions about John L. Lewis and most of them are unflattering.

A national survey by the Institute finds that for every voter who is wholeheartedly in favor of Lewis there are nearly 10 who condemn his tactics and polices.

In no public opinion survey ever conducted has the Institute encountered such harsh language from Americans as they use in giving their opinions of Mr. Lewis. Some had difficulty expressing their views because what first came to their minds was, they said, unprintable.

87 Per Cent Unflattering

National opinion on the mine union leader was sounded by a corps of 182 interviewers for the Institute. These interviewers talked to laborers, farmers, white collar workers, housewives—people in all walks of life in all sections of the country selected in such a way as to reflect accurately the views of the whole Nation.

"What is your opinion of John L. Lewis?"

The replies were taken down verbatim. When analyzed they showed the following totals:

opinions.

Had favorable opinions .. 9%
Had unfavorable opinions 87
Had no opinions ..... 4

A few (7 per cent) of those with unfavorable opinions said they thought that Mr. Lewis is a good labor leader, but that they disapprove of his recent conduct in the coal labor crisis.

There can be no question that Lewis holds the respect of some industrial workers. They admire him for fighting the battles of the workingman, for improving working conditions, and for giving labor a powerful voice in national affairs. Such comments as "he's taking care of the laboring classes," "he stands behind the working people," and "he's loyal to his followers and wouldn't sell them out" are typical of that point of view.

It is an attitude not shared, however, by the great majority of the country. Their views are exemplified by these sample comments:

"Shoot him. He's a d——d flannel mouth."

"Lewis is America's No. 1 traitor."

"He's a terrible obstacle to our all-out effort to win the war."

"He's responsible for more sabotage than anyone else in the country."

"Rule or ruin—that's Lewis. Jail is the place for him."

"Try him for treason."

"He's a sorehead, and a dirty, treacherous scoundrel."

"Give him to Germany. That's where he belongs."

1944 Repercussions

It is interesting to note that the American people were calling Mr. Lewis criminal and traitor before the Connally-Smith bill, officially making it a crime to foment strikes in Government-held plants, was passed by Congress.

If national opinion toward Mr. Lewis continues as it is today, it will undoubtedly affect his political power in 1944 and may even have repercussions on the labor leader after the war.

4 Senators Seek to Write Peace Commitments Into House Measure

A Senate fight to write specific postwar commitments into the House Foreign Affairs Committee's "lasting peace" resolution last night was promised by the original four sponsors of congressional action now on postwar peace objectives.

Authors of the Senate's so-called "B2 H2" postwar plan praised the more general House Fulbright resolution as "a step in the direction that we think the American foreign policy should take," adding: "We are happy that the House Foreign Affairs Committee recognizes this need."

"But we four who sponsored Senate Resolution 114 are still going to work for a more specific resolution by the Senate embodying the points we made in our resolution."

This brief statement was signed by Senators Ball of Minnesota and Burton of Ohio (Republicans) and Senators Hatch of New Mexico and Hill of Alabama, who introduced their own bipartisan postwar plan last March 16.

The Fulbright declaration, avoiding any blueprint for postwar reconstruction, merely commits Congress to "appropriate machinery" with power to establish and to maintain a just and lasting peace and as favoring United States participation therein."

But Senate resolution 114 asks that this Government take the initiative in forming a United Nations organization not only to prosecute the war, but to:

1. Establish temporary administrations for Axis-controlled areas as they are occupied.

2. Administer relief and aid in economic rebuilding of member Nations and occupied Axis territory.

3. Establish machinery for peaceful settlement of disputes between nations.

4. Form a United Nations military force to put down future attempts at aggression.

Senator Ball, chief author of the long-pending Senate measure, said what amendments are offered in the Senate will depend on the form of the resolution reported by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Ball said he expected to see a resolution "more specific" than the Fulbright declaration adopted by the Senate.

Seven Others Pending

Chairman Tom Connally of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee pointed out that there were seven other postwar resolutions pending before his special postwar subcommittee. He said the Fulbright resolution was "all right" but implied that his committee will have changes to suggest.

"We have studied this matter for a long time, and of course will report a resolution of our own," said Connally.

The Senate Foreign Relations chairman said his committee will wait until the House acts and will probably report out a resolution shortly after Congress returns from its midsummer recess.

Chairman Sol Bloom of the House Foreign Affairs Committee will ask Rules Committee right-of-way for the Fulbright resolution next week.

WMC Urges Army to Free Engineering College Students

The War Manpower Commission urged yesterday that the armed forces give "serious consideration" to releasing to industry some of the 6400 engineering college seniors now committed to military service through the enlisted reserves.

A report by the WMC's "roster of scientific and specialized personnel" said also that some essential activities are threatened with an acute shortage of qualified engineers unless thousands are transferred to them from less essential work.

It said nearly one-fifth of the Nation's 280,000 professional engineers already are in uniform or are serving the War and Navy Departments in civilian roles, while more than one-third of this year's 17,000 engineering college seniors are in the enlisted reserves.

WMC officials said yesterday that some nonessential activities might have to be converted or closed down in areas of critical labor shortage in order to meet manpower requirements of war industry.

But most curtailment of this kind, they said, will follow naturally as plants making nonessential goods find it harder to get materials and concerns selling nonessential goods find themselves with little or nothing to sell.

Hoover, Gibson See Handicap In Hasty World League Plans

By the Associated Press

New York, June 17—Former President Herbert Hoover and Hugh Gibson, former U. S. Ambassador to Belgium, declared today the establishment of a "world institution" should be the last phase of peacemaking and not the first.

In Collier's Magazine, the two men declared to intrust such an institution with the task of maintaining order as soon as the firing ceases "would be to repeat again one of the greatest of handicaps" under which the League of Nations labored.

They pointed out that it was six years from the victory of Yorktown to the Constitution of the United States and added that "the permanence of that instrument is evidence that this six years of discussion and thought was not wasted time."

"The League of Nations," they declared, "was the greatest experiment in history by definite organization to keep peace in the world. It was a magnificent attempt."

They suggested the foundation for a new world body "should be a simple statement as to its broad purpose to preserve peace." They added the foundation "should include the terms of the Kellogg Pact by which nations renounced the use of war as an instrument of national policy."

Declaring the League of Nations became an agency for maintaining the status quo, Hoover and Gibson said:

". . . Throughout all history, nations change in their strength, their influence, their sympathies and their interest. There can be no rigid pattern now or later. Peace cannot be preserved by putting nations into strait jackets. And any attempt to maintain the status quo in a changing world is a direct invitation to war. . . ."

They pointed out that "while the league had notable success in pacific methods from which the growth and development of precedent and experience gave it strength, yet the minute it failed to apply force when faced with the necessity for doing so, it lost such prestige and strength as to weaken it in the field of pacific settlement."

Japs Traded Food Hoards For Whisky, Dies Group Told

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, June 17.—Testimony of secret hoards of food stocks, some of which he said he believed had been traded by Japanese for whisky and chickens, was given a Dies Congressional Subcommittee by a former employe of the Heart Mountain Relocation Center in Wyoming.

Earl A. Best, a wounded veteran of Dunkerque who said his son, Clifford, was killed in Africa last January, told the committee yesterday he was sent to Heart Mountain last December as an associate steward after having served for a time as chief steward at the Poston (Ariz.) Relocation Center.

During a month-long inventory of food at the Heart Mountain camp, Best said, he found 36 of the center's 42 kitchens had supplies hidden in their attics.

In one of them, he declared, a Japanese cook showed him secret pantries reached by sliding doors in the kitchen walls, one of them about 5 by 15 feet in size and piled to the ceiling with foodstuffs.

He notified the project director about the secret storerooms, he added, but no action was taken.

"At one time while I was there, there were 10,000 gallons of mayonnaise, when they were using only 600 gallons a month," Best testified. "Much of this supply had gone back to oil.

"There was a 65-months supply of corn meal. There was a five-year supply of canned tomatoes, at the rate they were using them, but on the ration point system there was enough for eight years."

Expressing the belief that "it was a case of their wanting to steal it and trade it for whisky and other things," Best declared he had heard from Japanese at the camp that a chef was trading hams for whisky with Japanese soldiers from the United States Army who visited the camp on furlough.

He said the garbage collector was selling chickens to the Japanese and that many of the kitchens had as much as 200 to 300 pounds of chickens on hand. No money was ever seen to change hands in such transactions, Best added.

Fire Forecast In Quiz of N.Y. Mayor's Office

By the Associated Press

New York, June 17.—The administration of Fiorello LaGuardia, for years the recipient of glowing tributes as a model for municipal government, squared itself today for the first full-fledged investigation into its affairs since the fiery little mayor became New York City's chief executive in 1934.

Not since the famed Seabury inquiry into the administration of former Mayor James J. Walker in 1932 had the prospect of political fireworks been so promising, although the proponents of the move—the city council Democratic majority—insisted that their motives were divorced completely from politics.

Councilman Walter R. Hart, sponsor of the surprise resolution which set up the council nivestigating committee in a stormy post midnight session yesterday, told reporters today the inquiry would concern itself with all city departments and would "not be a smear of any individual." Hart is chairman of the investigating committee.

What the inquiry was aimed at specifically was difficult to determine. There have been charges recently that City employes and equipment have been used at Sanito Hills, a Duchess County retreat for Department of Sanitation Workers."

Aside from the normal Democratic antipathy toward the mayor—a political irregular whose support long has come from the city's fusionist group—the investigation appeared largely to be the outgrowth of resentment of the Democratic majority against an admniistration-sponsored investigation (which misfired) into the distribution of civilian defense stirrup pumps, which are used in fighting fires resulting from enemy raids.

The case was "broken" last November by Commissioner of Investigation William B. Herlands, who alleged in a report that Milton Solomon, an attorney, had solicited an $8000 retainer from a firm distributing the pumps at a time when the council was considering legislation removing them from the list of civilian protection equipment.

The Herlands report charged that Solomon represented himself as a close associate of Councilman Hart and that he (Solomon) would use his influence to kill the bill. Solomon was tried and acquitted on the charge.

The investigating committee's first move today was to subpena Herlands to appear before the committee tomorrow.

Some Book 3 Applicatons to Be Delayed

Not until August 1 will local War Price and Rationing Boards accept applications for Ration Book No. 3, from persons who, for some reason, are not receiving their books by mail, the District Office of Price Administration said yesterday in an appeal to Washingtonians to refrain from swamping boards with inquires in the matter now.

At the same time, OPA officials pointed out that these late comers will still have sufficient time to procure the new replacement book since it will not be used until late August or early September.

The request to delay further action until after August 1 also applies to persons who have mailed their applications before the June 10 deadline but have not received war ration book No. 3 "because the information on the application card was illegible or because names or addresses were not set forth on the application card."

Once in possession of the new book, all the holder has to do is to write in his address, age, sex, weight, height, occupation and signature in the spaces provided on the cover, it was pointed out.

A WALKING THEATER HISTORY is Gus Van, now at El Patio, who's been a headliner for these 30 years. Gus says his first Washington engagement was at Chase's Theater. It stood on the present site of "Mellett's Madhouse" right across from the Willard Hotel. He came to Washington later with Dillingham and Ziegfeld revues, also appeared at Keith's when it was a vaudeville house.

"My English, she is not so good looking," says Carlos Molina, new maestro at Del Rio. But Molina and his music are both handsome—definitely.

TALIA, THE LOVELY, is back at Troika after months of heading a revue at Chicago's Bismark Hotel. The dancing Chadwicks are now at Troika as a result of Helen Hamilton seeing them in the recent "Latin Quarter" show at the Capitol Theater. Roy Benson, bewildering magico, is held over.

NEW KEY MEN. Arthur Rabe, new manager of the Hamilton Hotel, has been with the Manger Chain for 14 years, which means that what he doesn't know about running a hotel could be written in capital letters on the back of a postage stamp. He was also the owner of New York's famed Club Alabam' and is overflowing with ideas for nifty innovations in the Hamilton's Rainbow Room . . . Ben Wiener,, who's taken over the managership of Treasure Island, is a former radio exec. He's a genial soul with a thousand friends who'll probably be dropping in for cocktails and dinner at the Island . . . Paul Gleim, new assistant manager of Hi Hat, retired from the Marine Corps in '41. He was a specialist in the Quartermaster Corps. Which seems to make him just the right man for Hi Hat.

The decorative court plaster covering the nose of violinist Durward Bowersox of Bert's Trans-Lux is a souvenir of a bump into a windshield.

NEPTUNIANA. Frank Victor's Neptune Room contract has been extended until August 1 . . . Connie Howell has new gold earrings that jingle in time with her vibes and maracas. She's thinking of hanging bells on 'em, too . . . Accordionist Lydia Ehrens is now a stunning blonde instead of a pretty brownette.

A SMART GUY is Don Shalita, new emcee at the Casino Royal. He leads the applause for himself! Senor Don looks like John Gilbert, if you can remember back that far, sings with verve. Keeling and Miller play slide trombones, recover their breath by doing handsprings. The Continental Duo is the most pleasing skating act we've seen for a year. They gave a free ride to a game and cute little WAVE the night we visited.

SONGBIRD'S RETURN. Pert Kay Hunt, who sang with Alan Holmes' band in the Metronome Room came visiting there the other night. She's now Mrs. Calvin Field; hadn't sung since her wedding. But Sandy Sandifer had her up on the bandstand in a minute and singing "I Cried For Tom." Later she jitterbugged with one of Sandy's sax players. It was like old times.

Phyllis Sage, the lovely young person who finds your fortune in your palms at Restaurant "400," is a sister of newspaperwoman Rosalind Davis of the New York Herald Tribune.

CLOSINGS IN OFFING. Al Simmonds will close his Brown Derby in mid-July, reopen late in August. He's lining up the Mills Brothers, Golden Gate Quartet, "Fats" Waller and the Jones Brothers for fall bookings . . . Mischa Bess has decided to refresh his Balalaika Russians with a generous vacation. The spot will close on July 31, reopen around Labor Day.

LIKEABLE LISTENING. "Let's Get Lost," as played by Myles Hallett's Band on the Starlight Roof, will set you star-gazing . . . Another dose of undiluted magic is Grieg's "Hall of the Mountain King" in double piano by the Heintze Brothers of Restaurant "823" . . . Connoisseurs of le jazz hot are happified when Les Williams of the Old New Orleans sounds off on "Hep to Your Jive" . . . Glen Echo's Paul Kain says "You'll Never Know" (written by a convict) is a top request number . . . Maestro Frank Ruiz of the Copocabana, is playing quantities of unusual and hectic rumbas . . . Sammy Richardson is giving his all of romance to "It Can't Be Wrong," at the Lotus . . . Georgia and Jerry of the Anchor Room, will have you weeping into your julep when they sing "Coming in on a Wing and a Prayer."

Pleasure driving's no problem to patrons of the Louisiana over in Georgetown. It's only one block (downhill, too) from the busy M Street carline . . . Ditto for popular Crossroads, where the buses roll by the door every few minutes . . . And Kavakos Grill has the ideal nitery location in these days of gas stress. It's at the intersection of the Eighth and H Street carlines over Northeast.

Grown-up Judy and Ginny Come to the Capitol

By Mary Harris

Destiny's tots of the movies are swiftly becoming adult stars—in accomplishment as well as age. Judy Garland who used to prance with Mickey Rooney and Virginia Weidler whom you'll remember as a freckled moppet, are occupying the top stage and screen positions at the Capitol Theater this week.

Judy's been growing up with no end of velocity in the last season but as the dramatic young star of "Presenting Lily Mars" she does more than toy with emotions, frequently comports herself like a junior Barrymore.

Virginia Weidler is making her stage debut as a singer and comedienne, but you'd never recognize her. Gone are the freckles and pigtails. She's a beauteous young creature with a long blonde bob, a voice and a way with her that captivated yesterday's audience into demanding encores. She's versatile, too, was equally happy in doing a Harry James arrangement of "Honeysuckle Rose" and a jive version of "Rockabye, Baby."

"Presenting Lily Mars," as written by Booth Tarkington, has so much human appeal, pleasant comedy, suspense and the more subtle form of theatrical glamour that it could hardly have been a chore at all to mold it into movie form. Its leading role is the sort for which young actresses would cheerfully barter their eye teeth and hopes of heaven.

Indomitable Gal

In essence Lily Mars is a Tarkington type, reminiscent of Alice Adams, but luckier and more loveable. Her widowed mother supports the family all 'round in spite of one boy being a collector of door knobs while Lily dramatizes herself from morning until night. It's a dear sort of family. They all believe in each other, collaborate with brother in his artistic larceny of door knobs, are convinced that Lily will some day be another Sarah Bernhardt.

Indomitable is the word for Lily. After delivering a hat to a theatrical producer's mother and being thoroughly snubbed by him, she steals the fellow's new play, shanghais him into hearing her do a bit from "Macbeth" as the price for getting it back. Later she crashes his mother's party and sings with the orchestra before she's tossed out. It's all strictly no good. But Lily, the uncrushable, follows the producer to New York. You might know it—the poor guy breaks down and falls in love with her. He even tries to star her. But Lily's ambition is bigger than her ability and she has to be relegated to the role of chambermaid—after her family has come to New York to see her in a leading role and her hometown paper has published columns about her swift rise. It wouldn't be right to tell any more of the story—but you can go to see "Presenting Lily Mars" with the assurance that Lily wangles a happy ending out of all this grief. The Lilys of this world are like that.

Van Heflin Scores

Van Heflin, who plays the producer, looks like a gift from the gods to Hollywood in these days of the famine in leading men. (Provided he's a bona fide 4-F.) He looks something like Nelson Eddy and has ten time more acting ability. Spring Byington plays Lily's mother, pours syrup all over the part in the inimitable Byington manner. Almost the same comment might be made on Fay Bainter as the mother of Van Heflin. Marta Eggerth is a temperamental musical comedy star, gives the part the sleek, trouping finish needed.

But next to Judy Garland, the outstanding femme is an unnamed lady who plays a charwoman who was once a singer. When she and Judy sing "Every Little Movement" they create the most poignant moment in the show.

Fun overflows in practically every minute of the action. Even when Lily has her moments of complete discouragement they're capped with an audience laugh, because all her little sisters start to weep and wail with her.

For those folks who've been hollering for "escapist entertainment" the appearance of "Presenting Lily Mars" is exactly what they ordered. It offers two hours of swift amusement and forgetfulness of the current state of the world.

If there is a criticism of the show it will come from the high schoolers who will probably allege that the appearances of the Bob Crosby and Tommy Dorsey bands are too short. Nor do any of the show's songs promise to reach the hit parade.

Though the interest of the stage show centers largely in Virginia Weidler, it's rich in other good diversion. The Radio City Music Hall Club, attired in green sweaters and a great variety of moustaches, sings old time songs with the melodramatic touch, even puts on a bit of a melo called "Don't Go Into the Lion's Cage Tonight." They also climax the show with a military number which introduces a rarely attractive little rascal, dancer Dorothy Keller. She's as much an actress as a dancer—and she's an all-fired smart dancer.

Davidson and Forgie, badminton champions, are the sports department of the show. They're so diverting that it makes one to wonder if badminton isn't going to climb right up alongside tennis and its little brother, table tennis, as a popular game.

Dave Barry, amusing as himself, becomes even more entertaining as Wendell Willkie, a shipyard worker, a riveter and other assorted characters. Sam Jack Kaufman and the Capitol Theater Orchestra give an airing of Cole Porter in their overture. Art Brown at the organ leading the audience in singing about that good old fellow who's getting a once-a-year break this week—Father.

Child Star Grows Up

Virginia Weidler, quite the young lady now, headlines the new stage bill which opened yesterday at the Capitol

A Spectacle in Technicolor Opens at RKO-Keith's

By Marjorie Kelly

Yesterday morning, at what for us is the crack of dawn, we were down at Keith's along with the no-longer-confined in school adolescents and the swing-shift workers and the rest of the morning matinee set for an opening.

The picture was "White Savage," described by the advance notices as "Fabulous romantic drama with torrid excitement." And, strangely, the press agents were just about right. We were in for 95 minutes of just that—"fabulous romantic drama."

Torrid It Is

The story deals with the adventures of Jon Hall as a shark hunter interested in obtaining a concession to fish in certain waters over which a native princess, played by the pulchritudinous Maria Montez, has jurisdiction. The problem, then, is to get the princess to come across with the concession.

Hall gets off to a famous start when, seeing an alluring wench on the wharf, he casts his fishing line deftly and catches her "sheerong" with the hook. While disengaging her, he makes some misogynistic remarks about women in general and in particular the sea-hag of a princess who refused his concession.

The discovery that the girl is the princess herself doesn't even dent young Hall's nonchalance, however. He discovers simultaneously that she is extremely pretty, and kisses her. The princess, a fiery little piece, slaps him smartly and sends him packing. But that doesn't close the matter; it merely sets off a series of events in which the photogenic Sabu figures as a very active go-between.

Costumes are gorgeously colorful, and the elaborate settings serve as an effective background for rapid, continuous action. Spectacular pageantry includes a native festival and an earthquake.

If, with all this and Technicolor, too, we found the dialogue naive and most of the supporting players' performances pretty unconvincing, maybe it's because we dwelt too much on those advance notices.

Most interesting of the short subjects is the Government's release "Message from Malta," which endeavors to show a typical day on the little island whose stubborn resistance in the face of constant attack has greatly facilitated the African campaign. The inhabitants are shown going about their daily business, then under attack, and after the all-clear is sounded, returning to everyday living. Their matter-of-fact courage is neatly symbolized by the flower-shop owner who emerges from his shelter after the attack and immediately begins arranging the flower display on the outside of his shop.

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway Gazette

Last week Eleanor Roosevelt went to Norwalk, Conn., to participate in the Town Hall meeting, where there was to be a discussion of "Can Democracy Win the War?" W. L. White, author of the current best-seller, "Queens Die Proudly," was the moderator for that meeting, substituting for a local man . . . Before he introduced Mrs. Roosevelt, White received a slip of paper on which was written the subject of the debate. It was the wrong slip, for it bore the subject of a future debate there—on Eli Culbertson's World Federation. He introduced Mrs. Roosevelt, and said she would speak on the topic, "Is the World Ready for Federation?" Instead of reminding him of the error, Mrs. Roosevelt calmly made a stirring, eloquent speech on federation.

BETTY GRABLE

Sergt. Wallace Robert Russell, author of "The More the Merrier," who now is stationed in Washington, earned enough money from the sale of the movie to be married. His fiancee is Margot Stevenson, the actress. He and Miss Stevenson now are scouring Washington to find a home—in vain. They can't even find a landlord willing to take their names and phone numbers, in case a vacancy should occur.

The President of Liberia, who visited Mayor LaGuardia's home yesterday, met every member of the LaGuardia family except young Eric. The mayor's son refused to come down from his perch on a tree . . . Garson Kanin, the movie director, was commissioned as a second lieutenant, assigned to the Office of Strategic Services, yesterday—on the second anniversary of his joining the Army . . . Frank Sinatra, who has been singing Harold Arlen's "Black Magic," will express his appreciation by recording Arlen's songs which were written for the new Fred Astaire film. To avoid conflict with Petrillo's ban, Sinatra will record it with a choral accompaniment.

Some months ago, in a movie fan magazine, the feature article was signed by Betty Grable—an article in which the screen star confessed that her suppressed desire was to have a date with Vincent Sheean . . . Saturday night Miss Grable was in the Stork Club, with Harry James. Lieutenant Colonel Sheean was there too, and learned of her presence. They were introduced to each other. Miss Grable, holding hands with Harry James, later confessed that a press-agent had written that magazine article. "In fact," she confided, "the only Sheean I ever heard of is Winnie Sheean." . . . "The only James I ever heard of," Sheean said, "is Henry James."

Arturo Bickford, the former President of Guatemala, attended the recent Food Conference at Hot Springs. He reports this detail: The State Department supplied 210 secretaries, all chaperoned, for the meeting. At 9 p. m. the orchestra struck up some dance music and the secretaries were permitted to engage in some chaste dancing with the dignitaries. But at midnight a gong was struck, and like Cinderellas, the girls vanished and rushed to their quarters . . . Alfred Hitchcock's dieting has resulted in his losing 49 pounds so far . . . The mental telepathist on "Hobby Lobby" last week lost in a poker game with the actors before he went on.

All of Alexander Woollcott's friends who have interesting letters from him are being asked to mail them to Viking Press in New York, which will publish the collection on September 1.

Costello, the Perfect Host

Hollywood, Calif., June 17.—I wonder if it's true that as soon as Veronica Lake's next baby is born she'll skip to Reno for a quick divorce. It could be . . . Wouldn't you know Producer Joseph Pasternak, who can afford to buy 20 fur coats, would win the one the WAACs auctioned off? . . . Since Darryl Zanuck's release from the Army on inactive duty until another war assignment comes along, he'll pick up where he left off at Twentieth Century. His first picture will be "Woodrow Wilson" . . . On May 20 I wrote that Charles Boyer's next picture would be "Gaslight." It's taken all this time for the mighty Metro to sign him up . . . Cary Grant is the most likely contender for the part of Cole Porter in "Night and Day," Cole's biography.

MARTHA RAYE

Mending Now

Martha Raye's had three blood transfusions. She isn't allowed visitors. One that was mighty welcome, however, arrived the other day—the bulldog Tartar, mascot of a squadron of R. A. F. fighters she entertained in North Africa . . . The reason Lou Costello has been barred from having visitors is that he forgets he's a patient. He goes into comedy routine to try to entertain them . . . Olsen and Johnson have put their foot down—they won't allow one reference to war in their new picture. It'll be strictly for laughs . . . Pvt. Desi Arnaz ripped the ligaments of both legs in a baseball game, and will spend the next three weeks in Arlington, Calif., Army Hospital . . . Gale Sondergaard has signed a long termer at Universal. Her first picture will be "The Strange Death of Adolph Hitler," opposite Lurwig Donath, who plays Adolf . . . I don't think there's a star in town who would have done what Dorothy Stickney did. For three years she's starred on Broadway in "Life With Father." When asked to do an unimportant bit in "The Uninvited" she said, "Sure, why not? I'd like to see how I look on the screen." The part ran one day . . . Joan Fontaine wears a red wig in "Frenchman's Creek." It's in technicolor. Anne Shirley had to bleach to a pale gold so she wouldn't look like Olivia de Havilland in "Government Girl" . . . Betty Hutton has a two-week vacation coming up in New York . . . When Ginny Simms appeared three nights running with Pat Nearney she was asked if it was marriage. She said, "I don't know yet. He hasn't asked me." That Pat sure gets around.

Yes and No

Tina Thayer has been borrowed for the next Henry Aldrich picture. Metro's trying to borrow Shirley Temple for the next Hardy film with Mickey Rooney—but no soap . . . The film company that discovered Tyrone Power and many others has discovered oil. They've got a permit to drill for it, too. Them as has gits—and that's Twentieth Century . . . Mrs. Fred Astaire joins Fred Wednesday on a tour of Army camps. Barbara Hutton's doing the same thing with Cary Grant . . . Ida Lupino and Ann Sheridan are making bets as to which one will get the new Philip Wylie story, "Jury Adjudicates." It's a comedy . . . Lieut. Burgess Meredith is in London, while Paulette Goddard is cutting down the timber on his farm. She's rented it to pay taxes on it. Paulette arrived today for "Standing Room Only" with Fred McMurray.

Answer Will Be No

Sam Wood, on his return from New York, will stop in Washington to try to persuade Robert Sherwood—in between the President's speeches—to do a dramatization of "Craigs' Apothecary" . . . Turnhan Bey will costar with Maria Montez and Jon Hall in "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves" . . . Herman Rauschnig, who's written "Voice of Destruction," will do the technical end of "The Hitler Gang" with the Hacketts, who are writing it. So far, Peter Van Eyck is the only one set to play in it . . . What's this? Hedy Lamarr has a "No Visitors" sign on her set since her marriage . . . Rudy Vallee has withdrawn his application for a lieutenant's commission. He'll remain a chief petty officer. His application must have gotten lost under an avalanche of red tape . . . Georgie Jessel, four hours after arrival here, was out with his former wife, Lois Andrews, at a night spot autographing copies of his latest book.

Bruce Humberstone asks if anybody remembers "Chookeeta," serpentine hip roller of the first Chicago World's Fair. He wants to duplicate her in "Pin Up Girl" . . . Bing Crosby, while in New York, recorded several discs for the Treasury Department, accompanied by David Broeckman and orchestra. Broeckman—of the perfect hands—used to conduct for Crosby in Hollywood . . . Dave Hempstead wants some S. A. put into a bathing suit to be used for Ginger Rogers in "The Gibson Girl." Gosh! Those days they wore bloomers, cotton stockings, long sleeves . . . Mocambo was so jammed Saturday night Owner Charlie Morrison couldn't get his car on his own parking lot

Pan American Airways Net, Traffic Spurt

By the Associated Press

Juan T. Trippe, president of Pan American Airways Corp., said yesterday in the annual report that 1942 had been the most important period financially in the 15-year history of the corporation with business in excess of 109 million dollars.

Miles flown increased more than 80 per cent to 43,939,744, compared with 24,358,346 in 1941. Net income after taxes and other deductions, was $3,780,015, or $1.95 a common share, compared with $3,361,251, or $1.73 a share, in 1941.

Trippe reported that commercial services essential in war or peace, such as passenger, air mail and air express, had continued in addition to war services, training military personnel in operating large aircraft and constructing airports and other facilities in foreign countries.

His report disclosed that among passengers carried by clippers on war missions in 1942 were President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Winston Churchill of Great Britain, Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands and King George of Greece.

Pacific division personnel and facilities were being widely expanded, Trippe said, adding that in China Pan America's partnership national company, China National Aviation Corp., operated the only scheduled air transport service within the country and has been called China's aerial lifeline.

Trippe reemphasized that postwar air transportation could not be merely a luxury service for carrying well-to-do passengers at high prices, adding the company had started a program two years ago for constructing giant clippers.

"Each of these planes, for example," Trippe said, "would be capable of carrying 153 passengers from New York to London in 10 hours at a fare of $100."

Auto Plants' War Production Doubles Best Civilian Level

By the Associated Press

Detroit, June 17.—The automotive industry's production of war material currently is double the highest level of civilian output it ever attained and an ever-increasing volume of such production may be expected despite the drain on its manpower resources by the armed forces, the Automotive Council for War Production was told today.

(Figures recently released by the council placed the war goods production rate at approximately eight billion dollars annually.)

Reporting to the annual meeting of the industry's wartime organization, Alvan MacAuley, president of the council, said that war production has doubled in 12 months and that almost a million and a quarter men and women now are enrolled in the industry's army of war-workers.

C. E. Wilson, president of General Motors Corp. and head of the industry's manpower committee, said he could not foresee any serious interruptions in the immediate future to the industry's war production operations because of the diminishing number of workers.

He said that techniques and procedures worked out by the automobile companies and pooled for the benefit of the 500 council members should go far toward minimizing the industry's manpower problems.

Asserting that the biggest source of new workers will be found among women, Wilson said that by the end of the year many more of them will be working, especially in the manufacture of small parts and in jobs for which they are particularly fitted.

Praising the cooperative effort of the automotive industry as chiefly responsible for "the ways in which almost incredible obstacles have been overcome," MacAuley said:

We know it has put planes and bombs over Axis lines that could not otherwise have been there."

The same kind of cooperative action, he added, must be applied to the study of procedures deemed necessary to enable the Nation to make a more orderly transition from war to peace than that which occurred at the close of the last war.

"Unless something far different, far more responsive to needs than has so far been put into operation is developed for the orderly liquidation of the present total war production job," he said, "there can be no blinking the fact that the consequences would be ruinous."

Remington Rand Sales Set All-Time Record

New York, June 17 (AP).—Remington Rand, Inc., in its annual report today said production last year was at the highest rate in the concern's history with total sales up 19 per cent over the preceding 12 months.

James H. Rand, jr., president and board chairman, said war production in the company's regular plants and those constructed by the Government was rapidly increasing and this year would far exceed output of standard products.

Net profit, as previously reported, was $4,318,566, or $2 a common share, for the year ended March 31, compared with $6,195,414, or $3.08 a share, in the preceding year. Total direct taxes were $14,241,962 last year, compared with $9,917,771 in the previous period.

May Fire Loss Shows $6,064,000 Increase

New York, June 17 (AP).—The National Board of Fire Underwriters reported today fire losses in the United States in May were estimated at $29,297,000, an increase of $6,064,000 over the like month of 1942. The May aggregate compared with $34,241,000 in April.

Revenues Drop, Cities Declared Facing Crisis

Pittsburgh, June 17.—"Hard thinking" is needed to save cities "headed at high speed toward financial catastrophe" because the basis of their revenues systems is "slipping from under their feet," members of the Municipal Finance Officers Association were told today.

"No adequate substitute (for declining revenue) is being generally found," Dr. Charles E. Merriam of Chicago, vice chairman of the National Resources Planning Board, said at the association's convention.

"The personal property tax is fast disappearing," he said. "The real property tax is encountering severe difficulties with the withering of great sections of cities and the decline in the basic valuations upon which the tax is levied.

"We need some hard thinking on the relative priorities of local, State and national functions and services, and their relative shares in the available revenues intended for public purposes."

Dr. Merriam also said:

"Progress in the integration and consolidation of local governments has been relatively slow. City governments, county governments, school governments, park districts, sanitary districts, mosquito abatement districts and others are strewn around many of the cities both great and small without much coordination or cooperation in many instances. We might well plan for greater teamwork at this point."

Rail Freight Loadings Jump 28% in Week

By the Associated Press

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday that 854,486 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ending last Saturday.

This was an increase of 186,911 cars, or 28 per cent, compared with the preceding week; an increase of 21,851 cars, or 2.6 per cent, compared with a year ago, and a decrease of 8488 cars, or 1 per cent, compared with two years ago.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, June 17 (AP).—Wheat futures turned weak today in reflection of an expanding harvest area in the Southwest and an increase in the movement of the grain to principal terminals. Government efforts to relieve the tight-corn situation brought selling into oats and rye.

At the clas wheat wasHT8 HT8TH98

At the close wheat was ⅜ to ⅞ lower; July, 1.43@1.43⅛; September, 1.43⅛@1.43 : corn was unchanged; July, 1.05; rye was off ⅛ to ⅜ and oats were down ⅞ to 1⅛. Despite the slump in futures, cash oats were strong, No. 1 white selling at 74 cents a bushel, highest in several years.

As the harvest in the Southwest expanded, there were more reports that yields were turning out better than had been expected, and some grain men were inclined to believe the Government's June 1 forecast underestimated the total winter wheat crop. While heartening from the standpoint of the country's food supply, these advices had a bearish influence on futures.

Modest Rally Led by Rails In Quiet Deals

By the Associated Press

New York, June 17.—Quiet buying of rails and selected industrials today enabled the stock market to maintain its mild average recovery swing.

Further modest bidding appeared at the start but demand was far from pressing and, while there were a few wide spreads on the upside for isolated issues, gains for the most part ran to fractions. Top marks were reduced in the majority of cases at the close.

Special company developments, including dividends, helped individual stocks. A little purchasing here and there also was credited to the idea of per cent reaction had benefited the market's basic structure to some extent. On the other hand, reluctance to expand commitments was attributed to thoughts of broadening price controls to combat inflation. Expectations of a near-by important Allied thrust in Europe also kept the conservative ranks well populated.

The Associated Press composite of 60 stocks was up .1 of a point at 50.6. Of 831 issues traded, 388 advanced and 443 declined or were unchanged. Transfers of 740,670 shares compared with 870,010 yesterday and were the smallest since April 20 last.

Secretary Morgenthau's agreement with congressional leaders that new taxes that might be voted later in the year should not be retroactive on 1943 income aided sentiment but the 1944 picture so far as imposts on corporations were concerned, still were cloudy enough to temper the market's bullish urge.

Worthington pump directors voted another sizable payment on accumulated dividends and the company's preferred "A" jumped 8 points to 145 and the convertible preferred touched a new 1943 peak with a gain of 1 at 57. Hudson & Manhattan preferred tacked on 2 points at 9¾, a new year's high, and the common was up ⅜ to 2⅜ when the Interstate Commerce Commission granted the line a fare boost from 8 to 9 cents.

Debt Cut Is Urged For Seaboard R. R.

Norfolk, Va., June 17 (AP).—Special Master Tazewell Taylor had under consideration today the suggestion of a New York investment broker that an estimated 56 million dollars which the Seaboard Air Line Railway would have on hand on January 1, 1944, be used in part to retire outstanding obligations. The line has been in process of reorganization since 1930.

The suggestion was made by L. H. Rothschild of the investment firm bearing his name at an informal hearing before Taylor.

Upon Taylor's assertion that he was without authority to effect such a transaction, Rothschild replied that his recommendation was made on the assumption that the special master, the receivers and the receivers' attorneys might act in concert and present the matter to the United States District Court for approval.

WPB Reports 2% Dip In April Construction

By the Associated Press

Construction in the United States during April totaled 746 million dollars, a decrease of 2 per cent from March, 25 per cent from the peak reached last August, the War Production Board reported yesterday.

The agency predicted a further decrease of 5 per cent in May.

Direct military construction continued to decline in April, although there was a slight increase in construction of air fields. The sharpest drop was in ordnance plant construction.

Ken Sears Tags Where Jake Early Was as Nats' Catcher Scores

Jake Early slides safely across the plate with the second run of the Nats' seventh inning yesterday as Ken Sears lunges with the ball but misses. Ellis Clary's double scored Johnson and Early with the runs that put the Nats ahead—but not for long. Yanks won, 9-8

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Ossie Bluege thinks three of his Nats are good enough to be on the American League All-Star team. In the poll of managers which will decide the make-up of the team for the game with the National League All-Stars at Philadelphia on July 13, Bluege submitted the names of Dutch Leonard, Bob Johnson and Jake Early.

POVICH

Sentiment probably dictated Bluege's selection of Leonard. Certainly Big Dutch has been no ball of fire this season with his four victories and five defeats, and if Bluege wanted to stick strictly to salubrious results, he could have picked Milo Candini, who has won five straight without defeat.

Baseball men don't like to give up quickly, though, on a guy like Leonard no matter what his record shows, they know he is a tough pitcher to contend with. If, in picking Leonard, Bluege was not making his best choice, he knew he was not far wrong.

Bob Johnson was a natural choice for a post in the All-Star outfield. If his batting average this year is not exactly sensational that is offset by Johnson's numerous other attributes. Big Bob has been leading the league most of the season in runs driven in, getting maximum production out of his hits. Defensively there hasn't been a better outfielder in the league this sason. He leads all outfielders in throwing out base runners, and his hustling tactics with the Nats have netted him the imposing total of eight stolen bases thus far.

Bluege's selection of Jake Early ought to please the Griffith stadium customers. Some sort of recognition for Early has been long overdue. For two years now he has been one of the top catchers in the league, out-living an early reputation that classed him with the butcher boys.

Early has conquered his old weakness on pop fouls, and Bluege declares with reservation, that Jake has been the league's best-throwing catcher for the past two seasons. Early has been underrated for a long time.

"I don't have to make any apologies when I put Jake on the All-Star squad," says Bluege.

There's nothing official, as yet, about the make-up of the All-Star teams. In fact, beyond the date, and the scene, which have been set for the night of July 13 at Shibe Park there isn't a whole lot definite about the contest. The beneficiary is still unannounced, although some part of the funds will go to the major leagues' ball and bat fund for the armed services.

Judge Landis wants to include other funds among the beneficiaries, such as the Army Air Force Relief Fund, but that has not been decided. All moneys have been exhausted from the major league's original appropriation for baseball equipment for the soldiers and sailors, and Ford Frick, president of the National League, is eager to replenish his committee's funds.

History of a sort may be made when the team selections are officially announced. They may show Buck Newsom as one of the pitchers on the National League team. Newsom rates a selection with his record of six victories and two defeats. If he makes it he will be the first man ever to be selected for the All-Star games by both leagues. Newsom was an American League All-Star in the game at St. Louis three years ago.

It's pretty evident who the American League pitchers will be. The seven top men are Tex Hughson, of the Red Sox; Ernie Bonham and Spud Chandler, of the Yankees; Hal Newhouser, of the Tigers; Jim Bagby, of Cleveland, and Leonard, and Oscar Judd, of Boston. Judd is favored by Bluege, who saw him shutout the Nats last week. Bill Dickey is very apt to be named to the American League catching staff along with Early and Rollie Hemsley. In Dickey's case it will be an honorary selection, inasmuch as he caught few games for the Yankees this year. But no American League catching staff seems to be complete without him.

From here, the American League infield looks like Dick Siebert and Rudy York at first base; Bobby Doerr and Joe Gordon at second; Lou Boudreau, Vernon Stephens and Luke Appling as shortstops; and Ken Keltner and Pinky Higgins at third base.

The managers are permitted to name six outfielders, and when the selections are in, the name will probably be Charley Keller, Bob Johnson, Johnny Lindell, Chet Laabs, Dick Wakefield and Jeff Heath, we think.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, June 17.—Dave Woods, the best racetrack publicity man in the country, visited 80-year-old Matt Winn recently in Chicago and asked him what suggestions he had for New York racing—which is now in a lush position well beyond the dreams of avarice.

CONSIDINE

"I don't own any part of a New York track, nor do I want any part of one," the old gentleman said. "But if I ever came back to New York I'd build a super track, with the cooperation of the other tracks. It would hold 100,000, would be built on a subway line, and would operate only on Saturdays and holidays.

"With racing going as it is, no New York track can successfully handle the Saturday and holiday crowds. Ordinary week days are all right at the New York tracks, but something additional is needed for Saturdays and holidays, when the 'play' is getting beyond the two million dollar mark. The tracks already in operation would simply lease this super track for the big days. We could run a $50,000 race every Saturday during the entire racing season."

Old Matt is a man of splendid vision. To avoid all debate, he would make an ideal promoter for the Count Fleet—Whirlaway—Alsab race, when and if Herbert Bayard Swope can break down the resistance of the owners, who aren't chummy socially.

There is, of course, no way in which to compare the product of one sports generation with that of another. No one will ever be able to say, positively, that Dempsey could have beaten Louis, or vice versa. It is most difficult to compare ball players, too, because of the changes in the ball and the technique of the game. Could Wagner have outslugged Ruth?

But when a stop-watch enters into a sport it does much to unite the past with the present. There is scant doubt that Gunder Hagg, for instance, is the greatest middle distance runner who ever lived. He has run seven accepted distances between 1500 and 5000 meters faster than any other recorded runner ever ran them. The only conceivable doubt in mind is that certain runners of the past, by force of personality or shrewdness of pace, or some other artful trick of the trade, might have beaten him. Stake horses, for instance, will always beat platers—even though platers may exceed the standard time of the stake horses, when those platers run against other platers.

The stop-watch says, without much fear of contradiction, that Count Fleet is a faster horse than the commonly accepted champion of them all—Man O' War. The Count ran the mile and the mile and one-sixteenth faster as a 2-year-old than Man O' War ran them as a 3-year-old. When Man O' War won the Jockey Club Stakes in 2:28 4-5, at 1-to-100, it constituted a new North American mile and a half record He was burdened with 118 pounds. Count Fleet won the mile and a half Belmont Stakes this year in 2:28 1-5, under 126 pounds, breaking the stakes record—though he won by a sixteenth of a mile and hurt an ankle en route.

The lights are going out in boxing. The ban on Greco, and the collapse of Mike Jacobs' outdoor fight next week, came the same day as Willie Pep's formal entry into the Navy. The impending drafting of fathers will skim off a vast section of the money fighters now on the scene.

The heavyweight division, which normally carries the game, is dead. Jimmy Bivins and one or two rivals constitute the entire light heavyweight division. There does not appear to be a middleweight division any more. Ray Robinson, Fritzie Zivic, Henry Armstrong and one or two others can still produce a little excitement in the welterweight division. The lightweight and featherweight groups have been carrying the load ordinarily carried by the heavier divisions. But Pep's induction, and the promise that others in the group will go soon, takes the starch out of those breadwinning groups. The weight classes below that are dead.

We suspect that the ban on Greco will cause our own Army and Navy to clamp down on those favored fistfighters in uniform who have been permitted to engage in privately sponsored matches—though the two greatest attractions in boxing, Louis and Conn, are banned.

If there weren't a lot of loose money around, and if the public was not determined to pay top prices to see anything more exciting than a match between two clothesracks, the outlook would be hopeless for boxing promoters. It is dreary enough, and few will be able to stand off the wolf until—inevitably—the war, with its vast concentration of men, produces bumper crops of good fighters.

Chisox Beat Browns in 13th, 4-3; Appling Is Stick Star

Luke Doubles in Ninth Inning to Tie Score, Singles Home Winning Run in Thirteenth

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 17.—The Chicago White Sox won an overtime game from the St. Louis Browns today, 4 to 3, when Shortstop Luke Appling doubled to send home two tying runs in the ninth and singled to score Don Kolloway from second with the winning marker in the thirteenth inning.

Appling, who tied a major league record yesterday by sparking five double plays in the second game of a double-header, showed his offensive prowess today. With the Sox behind 3 to 1 in the ninth, he sent Jimmy Grant and Guy Curtright across home plate with his two-base hit. In the thirteenth Kolloway beat out a hit and stole second, and Appling brought him home with his third hit of the day.

Grant's first inning home run accounted for the other Sox run off Bob Muncrieff, who allowed 12 hits in going the route for the Browns, Gordon Maltzberger rookie Chicago pitcher, succeeded Lee Ross and Joe Haynes and shut out the Browns with two singles in the four extra innings to earn his second victory.

New York, June 17.—The New York Giants clubbed across five runs in the first inning today and went on to beat the Brooklyn Dodgers, 8 to 5, and sweep their three-game series.

It was the fourth consecutive defeat for the Dodgers and, while they lost no ground to the St. Louis Cardinals, National League leaders, they fell within two games of the third-place Cincinnati Reds.

Cawthon New Grid Coach Of Dodgers

By the Associated Press

Tuscaloosa, Ala., June 17.—Pete Cawthon, assistant football coach at the University of Alabama, said today he had been named head coach of the Brooklyn Dodgers of the National Professional Football League and would leave to assume his new duties immediately.

Cawthon said the appointment was made by Dan Topping, jr., owner of the Dodgers, after negotiations which lasted several days.

Cawthon formerly was head football coach at Texas Tech.

Cawthon said Topping, a captain in the Marines, "told me he was turning the whole outfit over to me for the duration, and I would be a sort of general administrator as well as coach."

The Dodgers were coached by Jock Sutherland, formerly at Pittsburgh, before Sutherland entered the armed forces during the 1942 season. Mike Getto coached the Dodgers last year.

Lew Lewandowski Named Grid Coach At U. of Nebraska

Lincoln, June 17 (AP).—J. (Lew) Lewandowski, for six years a member of the Conhurster Athletic staff, today was named acting athletic director and head football coach at the University of Nebraska, succeeding Lieut. Glenn Presnell, who left yesterday for the Navy Training School at Chapel Hill, N. C.

Lewandowski was hired as football and basketball assistant during Dana X. Bible's last season at Nebraska in 1936, although he did not report for duty until Col. Biff Jones' first year as mentor in the fall of 1937.

Over the six-year span he has served as freshman football coach; varsity end coach and chief scout; assistant baseball and head basketball coach; freshman basketball coach and head baseball coach.

Lewandowski came to Nebraska from Montana University.

Boston Manager Helps Team Win First, 5-4; Lose Nightcap Despite Rally, 8-7

By the Associated Press

Boston, June 17.—Appearing as a pinch hitter for the fourth time in the five-game series, Manager Joe Cronin belted out his second and third three-run homers today as his Red Sox split a Bunker Hill Day double-header with the Philadelphia Athletics. Cronin's first four-bagger of the day enabled the Sockers to win the opener, 5-4. The Athletics gained the nightcap by an 8-7 margin.

The Athletics had a 4-1 lead behind Russ Christopher in the seventh inning of the first game until, with Babe Barna and Skeeter Newsome on base, Cronin batted for starter Lou Lucier and tied the score by driving into the leftfield screen. The Socksers made their winning run against Everett Fagin in the ninth when, with the bases filled and two out, Tony Lupien grounded out to drive in relief runner Eddie Lake.

The Athletics were coasting along on an 8-4 lead when Cronin batted out his second pinch-hit homer of the day against Don Black with Bobby Doerr and Newsome on base in the eighth frame of the second game. Roger Wolff pitched the ninth for the Athletics and squelched the Red Sox's desperate closing rally.

Cronin bashed out his first three-run homer of the series in the first game of Tuesday's double-header while batting for Pitcher Mace Brown in the seventh inning of what resulted in a 7-4 defeat for the Red Sox.

Reds Bombard Krist, Defeat Cards, 6 to 1

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 17.—Manager Billy Southworth of the St. Louis Cardinals, who picks the spots for Pitcher Howard Krist, chose a tough one today for the tall right-hander, who was beaten, 6 to 1, by the Cincinnati Reds.

It was only the fifth defeat of Krist's major league career against 29 victories. He came to the Cardinalhs in 1941 and has been a remarkable relief pitcher, starting only occasionally. He has won three games this season.

The defeat was the Cardinals' second in a row at the hands of the Reds, marking the first time they had suffered two consecutive reverses in exactly a month. However, the loss meant nothing so far as their National League lead was concerned since the Brooklyn Dodgers also were beaten.

Elmer Riddle, pitching for Cincinnati, held the Cardinals to five hits, one of them a run-producing single by Ray Sanders in the fourth inning, breaking the first-baseman's string of 23 hitless trips to the plate.

Yanks Rout 3 Pitchers In Big Ninth

Clary Hits 2-Bagger To Give Team Lead in Seventh; Pyle Fills Bases in Relief Role

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Three Washington pitchers and the New York Yankees went to work on a two-run lead the Nats carried into the ninth inning yesterday and the completed job read: Yankees, 9; Nats, 8.

Early Wynn messed it up for the Nats, finally, by walking the winning run across the plate, after his predecessors, Roe Scarborough and Ewald Pyle, put the tying and winning runs on base with none out.

Staked to an 8-to-6 lead in the seventh when little Ellis Clary clouted a two-run two-bagger, Scarborough dismayed the 7000 Ladies' Day fans at the start of the ninth. The Yankees quickly put the tying run on base when Lindell's hard grounder over second was bobbled by Gerry Priddy, and Ken Sears followed with a solid single to right.

Pyle Walks Gordon

Pyle got the pitching job in this crisis and it was an unhappy choice by Manager Ossie Bluege. Etten dumped a single into short center to score Lindell and move Etten to second. Pyle botched the situation generally at this point by walking Gordon, filling the bases.

Wynn was called in, and the tying run scored on Johnson's long fly to Spence, which also moved runners to second and third. Pinch Hitter Tommy Byrne was intentionally passed, and Wynn got rid of Stirnweiss on a pop-up, but Metheney worked the count to 3 and 2, and drew the game-winning walk on an inside pitch.

Twice the Nats knocked down Yankee leads to go in front. After Young Jim Mertz had yielded up a run to the Yanks in the third, forcing it home with a walk to Etten, the Nats hauled off and clouted Ately Donald from the box with five runs in the same inning.

They unloaded seven hits in that third inning, after Clary commenced it with a two-bagger through the infield and scored on Sullivan's single to left. Case, Spence, Vernon and Priddy contributed singles and Jake Early delivered a double before Bill Zuber halted the rally.

Yanks Get Five

The Yanks countered with five runs of their own in the fifth to take a 6-5 lead. They knocked Mertz out of the box, and Nick Etten greeted Scarborough with a triple to center that drove in the third and fourth runs of the inning.

Hal Trosky Hopes To Make Comeback

Chicago, June 17, (AP).—Hal Trosky, hard-hitting first baseman who retired from the Cleveland Indians a year ago last winter because of continual headaches, worked out at Comiskey Park before today's game between the Chicago White Sox and St. Louis Browns and said that he would confer with Manager Lou Boudreau when the Indians arrived here for a series tomorrow with the idea of returning to baseball.

Trosky came here from his home in Norway, Iowa.

Paul Dean Plans to Quit Baseball for Barrel Works

Tells Browns He Can Make $1500 A Week on War Job

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 17.—Pitcher Paul Dean is contemplating quitting the St. Louis Browns to take an active part in a barrel factory in which he is interested in Arkansas, it was learned today.

The famed Dizzy Dean's younger brother and pitching partner in the Cardinals' great teams in the mid 30's left the Browns here last night to consult with Vice President Bill De Witt in St. Louis.

"He said that they figured if they could get the factory into full production they'd make $1500 a week, and so you can hardly blame him," Manager Luke Sewell said, explaining the barrels were needed to ship war supplies abroad.

Dean, who won 19 games and lost eight in a comeback at Houston last year, has seen little service this season for the Browns, with no victories or defeats in his record, having pitched only 13 1/3 innings and allowing 16 hits and five runs.

Dulaney's Two Straws Romps Home at Charles Town Track

Scores Over Celesti F. With Kirk Up

Fox Meadow Third, 5 Lengths Behind; Daily Double Pays $134.60 to a Few

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 17.—Two Straws, owned by H. R. Dulaney, jr., of Washington, D. C., had too many speed guns for a field of eight this afternoon and he won the fifth event, best offering on the Thursday program. With Jockey Carson Kirk doing the booting, the 4-year-old son of Chicstraw and Voteress came to the wire a length and a half in advance of A. and D. Jardon's Celesti F. Five additional lengths back came Galt Davis' Fox Meadow to be third in the test of about four and a half furlongs.

Celesti F was a slight favorite and Two Straws returned $6 for each $2 investment. The winner stepped the abbreviated route in :50 1-5 over a track that turned fast as the program progressed.

Kirk brought Two Straws out of the chute on top and drew out to a commanding lead. Celesti F was in second position. In the final straightaway, Two Straws began to tire and Celesti F gradually cut down her rival's lead. Fox Meadow closed gamely to be third.

A select few in the crowd cashed a $134.60 daily double. Mrs. Mary E. (Liz) Whitney's Royal Step, another winner for C. Kirk, stepped home in the first race to the tune of an $8.80 mutuel. In the second race, G. S. Gladney's Alimony Kid, sharp as a tack as the result of Jack Meier's training, won by two lengths and paid an individual mutuel of $24.80.

The veteran Sir Reg, under a good ride by Jockey Charlie Quattlebaum, won the fourth race. The 9-year-old found his racing legs in the late stages and wore down Durable to win going away by three lengths. Durable was second ahead of Merciless. The winner paid $7.20.

ULTIMA THULE, showing marked improvement, was within striking distance from start, took command when asked and won galloping. WAR BONNET went to front early, set good pace and closed gamely. UPSETTING was under indifferent handling and can do much better. FIELD OF GOLD was not a serious factor.

Air Current Wins Feature At Aqueduct

By the Associated Press

Aqueduct Racetrack, N. Y., June 17.—Benefiting by fast early pace that took its toll on speedier beginners, F. L. Tyler's Air Current got up in time to score his second straight triumph of the meeting in the featured fifth dash here today. Johnny Longden had to ride his hardest to get the $6.90 second choice home by three-quarters of a length over Charles Stern's Happy Note, favorite in the field of smart $6000 claiming sprinters.

Another large crowd of 16,901 saw Air Current complete the 6 furlongs in 1:11 4-5. Mrs. C. S. Bromley's In Question, making his first start since last December at Tropical Park, rallied to earn the show, a half dozen lengths out of it.

Happy Note and Albatross, a pair that rely strictly upon stealing an early advantage, went out as expected to vie for the lead. The former soon shook off his rival and opened up three lengths of daylight while Air Current was racing far in the ruck. After they swung into the long stretch, Longden urged Air Current into contention. The gelding gained with every stride and finally collared Happy Note as they drew near to the finish line, to win going away. In Question, running at a shorter distance than he prefers, overtook Rurales in the final drive.

1500-Meter Tops A. A. U. Card Tomorrow

Private Leonard, Bill Hulse Rated Dark Horse Threats In Favorite Race

By Orlo Robertson
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, June 17.—With Sweden's Gunder Haegg choosing to do battle with Greg Rice in the 5000 meters, the 1500-meter run in the National A. A. U. track and field championships Saturday and Sunday has lost some of its glamour but nevertheless it figures to be a right smart foot race.

Scheduled for Saturday, with the hopes that Haegg would elect to try for a double in his American debut, the metric mile will highlight a program that also will include senior finals in the 10,000-meter run and 3000-meter walk and 21 junior events. The Haegg-Rice duel is carded for Sunday.

Heading the field in the 1500, high spot of every championship since the days of Glenn Cunningham, are two veterans of the cinder paths—Gil Dodds, divinity student representing the Boston A. A., and Don Burnham, intercollegiate A. A. A. and national collegiate champion from Dartmouth.

It's not likely that either, or for that matter any of their rivals, will better Haegg's world record of 3:45.8, and even Walter Mehl's championship mark of 3:47.9 is only an outside possibility. Dodds, virtually unknown to track fans until the 1942 season, won last year in 3:50.2, with Burnham in sixth place.

Dodds, who likes to run as fast as he can as far as he can, is the key to the race. If he can carry his speed anywhere near the full distance, Mehl's meet mark may go by the boards. The bespectacled student preacher has won at a mile, 2 miles and 3 miles this spring, taking the New England A. A. U. mile title in 4:16.1.

Burnham won the intercollegiate mile in 4:18.2 and last week captured the national collegiate crown in 4:19.1.

There are two dark horses in the race, however, that may cause trouble. Bill Hulse, former New York University runner who will represent the New York Athletic Club, is one. Hulse, confident that he can beat Dodds, won the Metropolitan A. A. U. mile in 4:15 and a fraction and yesterday in a time trial was clocked in 2:45 for two-thirds of a mile. That's four-tenths of a second faster than the world record.

The other dark horse is Pvt. Bill Leonard of Camp Upton, who did his college running for Notre Dame. He won the Adirondack A. A. U. mile championship in 4:18.

Phils Split With Braves In Swing Bill

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 17.—Their four-game winning streak snapped by Manuel Salvo's four-hit pitching effort that gave the Boston Braves a 2-0 victory, the Philadelphia Phillies pummelled three Braves' pitchers to take a 7-2 victory in the second game of a swing-shift double-header today before 7379.

Powerless against Salvo, whom they had returned to the Braves several weeks ago, the Phillies came to life in the nightcap, collected 13 hits and scored in five straight innings starting with the second. It was their seventh win in nine games, and gave them the series with Boston, four games to one.

Nats Toss Off Game to Yanks

Johnson's single got the fifth run home.

The Nats tied the score in the same inning after Vernon walked and Johnson singled to center. Vernon scored from third as Early was pounding into a double play.

Vernon walked to start the seventh and went out stealing, but Johnson drew another base on balls from Zuber and after Early singled to center, Little Clary scored them both with a lusty double into deep left field, setting the Nats up in their 8-6.

Scarborough didn't allow a hit through the sixth, seventh and eighth innings, but came the ninth and you know what happened.

The Nats put the tying run on base with two out in the ninth, incidentally. Big Bob Johnson crashed a three-bagger off the right field wall. But Jake Early watched Johnny Murphy shove a third strike by him to make the Yankees' lead stick.

Two Matches To Johnsen

Davey Johnsen ran into unexpected difficulty before winning a City of Washington tennis tournament quarter-final match from Igor Cassini yesterday, and then swept aside Austin Rice to enter the final round.

Johnsen had won the first set from Cassini, 6—1, on Tuesday but rain postponed the second set. After being tied, 2—2, at the end of four games of the deciding set, Johnson quickly finished the match, 6—3.

Rice, third-seeded in the tournament, played below par tennis in losing, 6—3, 6—0, to Johnsen in the semi-finals on the 16th and Kennedy Street courts.

Jerry Courtney defeated Joe Hosick, of American U., 6—3, 6—3, in a quarter-final match which was completed yesterday and qualified to meet Buddy Adair in the semi-finals tomorrow at 6 p. m.

Indians Beat Tigers Twice With Rallies

Take Opener, 3-2, Win Nightcap, 6-5, In 12th; Naymick Is Double Victor

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, June 17.—Mike Rocco's fly scored Manager Lou Boudreau in the twelfth inning to give the Cleveland Indians a 6-to-5 triumph over Detroit's Tigers in the second game of a twilight-night double header. The Tribesmen staged a ninth-inning uprising to win the opener, 3 to 2.

Elongated Mike Naymick, who worked the last two innings of the opener, after Jack Salveson was removed for a pinch hitter, hurled hitless ball and was credited with the victory. The big fellow came back in the second game, taking over in the tenth after Jim Bagby and pitched three runless innings to win his second game of the night.

Newhouser forced Ken Keltner to ground out to start the ninth in the opener but singles by Buddy Rosar, Mike Rocco, Ray Mack, Joe Hoover's boot of Gene Desautels' grounder and Boudreau's one-baser produced the triumph.

The setbacks cost the Tigers a chance to move into second place ahead of the Washington Nationals who lost to the New York Yankees. The Indians moved into a virtual tie for sixth.

The Bengals picked up their first tally in the second when Ned Harris singled, stole second, reached third on Rosar's wild throw and scored on a fielder's choice. Pinky Higgins' single in the second sent Roger Cramer across the plate with Detroit's other marker.

Potomac Fishing Is Spotty But Rock Are Still Here

By Tom Moore McBride

It all depends on what kind of a fisherman you are whether you'll want to go fishing up the Potomac this weekend.

If you're one of the boys who say, "Fishing's swell as long as there's action, but when you sit around for a while and don't get a bite, I can't go for it"—stay away.

But if you're a real dyed-in-the-wool-till-the-last-horn-blows angler, give it a try. You may come back with a nice string of pan-sized rockfish, or a couple of big ones, or some catfish or a fair string of perch.

At least that's the way it's been all week. Spotty. The river's still a bit high and somewhat muddy, but it's clearing every day and by Sunday should be in better shape unless there's a sudden change in the fine weather everyone's been complaining about the last two days. There have been some good catches of rock, both large numbers of small ones and small catches of large ones, but they haven't been biting consistently. What's more, there have been more rocks caught on the outgoing than the incoming tide which they usually bite on.

Those big old cats, of course, don't mind hell or high water. There have been some whoppers caught lately on the old standby, cut shrimp. The rocks, incidentally, are feeding mostly on bloodworms, though the big ones won't scorn cut herring if you can get it.

REEL ANGLES: If you're one of the lucky ones who is planning a Maine fishing vacation, don't back down. Earl Doucette of the Maine Development Commission reports—so far—the best fishing season in Maine history . . . Hunters with guns of outsize caliber will welcome the news that Remington Arms Co., Bridgeport, Conn., has issued a catalogue of arms and cartridge adaptions, showing what ammunition in stock these days will fit what guns .

Goodman's Homer Beats Pirates, 3-2

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, June 17.—Ival Goodman's first homer of the season, a powerhouse drive fair by inches, scored three runs today and gave Chicago a 3-to-2 victory over Pittsburgh in a seven-inning contest, their lone victory in the three-game series.

The hit struck the narrow board carrying the foul line up the right-field stands and fell back into the field.

The Pirates got an unearned run in the third inning when Bill Nicholson threw wild returning a single by Jimmy Russell and Frank Colman scored from first base. Their other marker in the fourth came from Bill Baker's single, one of Vince Di Maggio's two doubles and an infield out.

Monarchs Beat Grays, 2 to 1

Without the services of "Satchelfoot" Paige, the Kansas City Monarchs last night, at Griffith Stadium, before 23,000, annexed the first of a three-game series with the Homestead Grays, leading 2-1 when the game was called in the seventh inning because of weather.

Paige, who arrived late because of priorities which caused him to give up his seat on a plane from Pittsburgh, is scheduled to pitch the first game of a double-header with the Grays Sunday afternoon.

Norris Phillips, who held the mound for the visitors, kept the Grays to two hits in six innings, but allowed nine walks, passing Buck Leonard and Josh Gibson up in the early stages, and striking out Gibson as he came to bat the third time.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Federal Payroll Cut Unlikely for Some Time

KLUTTZ

The Byrd Economy Committee report was the top topic of conversation in Federal offices here yesterday. Many employes assumed that an immediate cut of 300,000 Federal workers had been ordered and that it would take place soon. Well, the fact is that the committee only recommended that 300,000 employes be dropped and the odds are heavily against it being carried out any time soon. In fact, the Federal employe population is expected to increase after the 1944 funds become available on July 1. The Administration is trying to hold the number of Federal workers down to the present level of three million, but the odds are against it, too. Civil Service people sometime ago estimated the number of Federal workers would reach 3,500,000 a year from now.

You see, Congress isn't always consistent. For example, the Byrd Committee "recommends" that 300,000 employes be cut off the rolls and it orders the Budget Bureau to do the job. Yet earlier in the week the House Appropriations Committee raised the roof with the Budget Bureau for daring to impound a measly $8871 from the printing and binding fund of the Office of Education. The House Committee denounced this as an "unwarranted exercise of authority" and it nailed a rider to the Federal Security appropriation bill which prevents the Budget Bureau from withholding a dime of the vast amount appropriated in the bill. Budget reserves made by the bureau against the funds of Federal agencies have run into the hundreds of millions of dollars. This money has been saved.

You must agree that it doesn't make sense. One congressional committee orders the Budget Bureau to step in and make the agency economies. Another committee accuses the bureau of "thwarting the will of Congress" merely because it did recover $8871. And I'll bet that $8871 stopped a pet project of some member of the Appropriations Committee. Now what's the bureau to do? By the time they're all approved, it's a cinch that this year's appropriation bills will be substantially larger than last year's. And the more money Federal agencies have the more people they'll employ.

Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of the Treasury, took issue with some of the recommendations of the Joint Committee to Reduce Nonessential Expenditures.

The Secretary, who is a member of the committee, in a letter to Senator Byrd, also challenged the way the committee has classified Federal civilian war workers. The committee said that only 45 per cent are engaged in war production, while President Roosevelt contends that the total is 60 per cent, or 1,600,000.

Although in accord with the committee in its drive for economy, the Secretary wrote:

"I do not share the general implications in the report that the Civil Service Commission has failed to exercise properly its assigned functions and is primarily responsible for many of the unfavorable personnel conditions mentioned in the report.

"In the present emergency when the energies of the greater percentage of Government personnel are being taxed to the utmost in performing essential functions relating to the war effort, it is my belief that it is not an opportune time to undertake drastic and far-reaching changes in Government personnel administration."

Mitchell's Answer

The report also was answered in part yesterday by James P. Mitchell, personnel director of the Army Service Forces, in testimony before the Ramspeck Civil Service Investigating Committee. Mitchell said the War Department didn't have 419,000 "clerical" employes, as charged in the Byrd report. He did say, however, that it was all in what definition was placed on "clerical." He displayed a chart to show the department had 148,000 CAF-2's alone, or $1440 employes. About half of all the department's employes here are CAF-2's, Mitchell appeared to have convinced the Ramspeck Committee.

Senator Mead next week plans to call up the House-approved bill which would give legal status to the Board of Legal Examiners which will die on June 30 unless the Senate acts. Opposition to the bill has faded. . . Lawrence Appley has been given the combined jobs of deputy director and executive director at War Manpower. . . . The House killed that rider on the War Manpower appropriation bill which provides for Senate confirmation of all persons paid more than $4500. The Senate, however, is expected to put it back and if it does it'll cause a first-rate fight.

The Byrd Committee jumped on the Board of Economic Warfare for giving too many "unwarranted promotions." But that isn't half the story. BEW Boss Milo Perkins told the House Appropriations Committee that of his 502 top people, 380 are now making less than they made before. But these people get no credit whatsoever. Forty of them each had made more than $25,000 annually.

Keep Off!

An unusual appeal was made by the owner of a little lawn up on Sixteenth Street Northwest. He had just planted a few new seeds and is anxious to have a nice new lawn. So he put up a sign:

New seeds. Dogs keep off . . .

Judge Helps Pay Fine

Baltimore, June 17 (A.P.).—Cab Driver Charles R. Christopher, fined by Magistrate Elmer J. Hammer for failure to keep a proper log, counted up his money and found he lacked five cents on the $11.45 he had been penalized.

So the judge produced a nickel from his pocket and gave it to the cabbie, who paid the fine and left.

Fireman Stationed at White House Selected For Title of Washington's Ideal Father

Ideal Pop's Daughter Shows Talent as Ace Press Agent

Although the choice of Edward R. Curtis, White House fireman, who lives at 4112 Fifth Street Northwest, as Washington's ideal father, was made entirely on the basis of sincerity of content in the letter written by 13-year-old Edith, Post reporters after the judging were amazed at her near-perfect handwriting and facile vocabulary. She wrote:

"Dear Father's Day Editor:

"I understand that you are looking for the Ideal D. C. Father. Well, believe me my Dad is perfect. In fact my sister and I think he is super.

"I guess in analyzing a Dad to see if he were ideal, you would have to consider his character. his sacrifices, the kind of home and education he has given us and many other things. Our Dad is a perfect example of what every father should be. He has such a fine character and personality that not only his family loves him, but all who meet him admire his ways. He thinks not of himself, but of us. Never have we wanted for a thing.

Looks Out "for Little Girl"

"The only article he ever refused me was a bicycle, and I know it was for my own protection that this wish wasn't granted. The best Dad isn't the one who gives you everything you desire. It's the Dad who is looking out for his little girl.

"Dad also is to be praised for an outstanding characteristic. He has never broken a promise. Six years ago, when I started piano lessons, he told me that if I made good, when I was 12 years old, he would buy a baby grand piano. Last year on my twelfth birthday, not late but early, I found a beautiful piano all for me. We are not a rich family. We are of the middle class, just ordinary Mr. ard Mrs. America and family; so I know it took a good deal of hard work for Dad to keep his promise.

"Dad is not the kind of person who comes home from work, eats dinner and goes to bed early. He likes to sit around with his family in the evening and be a real pal to his girls. You see, he hasn't any sons to be pals with, only a son-in-law who is in the Navy and overseas. Dad is eager, however, to see that my sister's husband comes home soon, so he is saving every spare penny he can and buying United States war bonds. He tells us that this is the best way we can help and a sure way to get our sailor home and all the other boys back. We think he is right. Don't you?

Cooking's His Hobby

"Dad's greatest hobby is cooking, not ordinary cooking but careful selections of food. He is an expert at planning well balanced meals with few ration points spent. His meals taste wonderful. He gets a real joy from this hobby and is helping the war effort by seeing that his family is kept well and healthy by eating nutritious foods.

"Our Dad is all out for victory. He was a handy man around the house before the war, but now he is extra cautious to see that all furniture, plumbing, and electrical fixtures are in good condition. He knows that we will be taking from the armed forces if we ask for priorities on strategic materials. When the electric company made an appeal to all citizens of the D. C. to check their fuse boxes and circuits, he went immediately and answered their call by doing so.

"D. C. fireman is our Dad's job. He is devoted to his work because he realizes that it is his responsibility to protect the citizens of the District from the deadly flames of fire. He is glad to work odd and long hours because he is devoted to his job.

"Since the war began our mother has taken a job with the Government to help out during these trying times. We want to let you know that we have an ideal mother, too.

"Every father should be as our Dad, devoted to his job, family and country. Dad, in our opinion, is not only the ideal father of the D. C. but the ideal American Dad.

"Sincerely yours,
EDITH CURTIS."

Letter Written by His Daughter Tips Scales for Him

Meet Washington's ideal father: Edward R. Curtis of 4112 Fifth Street Northwest, who was chosen by judges of The Post's Typical Dad contest as a result of a letter written by his 13-year-old daughter, Edith.

Curtis, a District fireman, detailed to the White House to assist in its protection in case of air raid or fire, knew nothing of Edith's letter to The Post until the Father's Day, editor notified the youthful author by telephone.

Thrilled that her daddy had been elected Washington's top pop, Edith decided to wait until he came home from his 3:30-to-11:30 p. m. shift at the White House to break the news to him. With her elder sister, Mrs. Richard Anderson, and her mother, it was an enthusiastic delegation that met Curtis at the door—and he was as pleased at the nomination as was the rest of the family.

Born Near Culpeper

Curtis, a strapping man who looks much less than his 46 years, was born and brought up on a big farm near Culpeper, Va. During World War I he worked both at the Aberdeen (Md.) Proving Grounds and at Fort Humphrey, Va., now known as Fort Belvoir.

He joined the District Fire Department in January, 1919, and was married eight months later. The Curtises' married daughter, Audrey, is 21 and has just completed her course at Wilson Teachers' College. Her husband is a storekeeper theird class in the Navy, and is stationed somewhere in the Pacific.

Edith, who wrote the letter that was the unqualified choice of Post city room folk, is just ending the eighth grade at Macfarland Junior High School.

Wife On War Job

Mrs. Curtis is working at a war job for the duration, serving at a war bond counter at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. Because she works on a late evening shift, she leaves all the marketing and cooking up to her husband, who is an expert on quality of vegetables and meats because of his farm training years ago in Virginia.

Late yesterday Curtis met H. W. Dean, chosen as the typical war-worker father of the year by the National Father's Day Committee, and Mrs. Dean, and accompanied them to the office of Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, where Dean, a Florida shipbuilder, was awarded a medal bearing his title. With Admiral Land was Edgar Kaiser, son of Henry J. Kaiser, famed California shipbuilder.

City News In Brief

Jennie Travers, Negro, 63, was fleeced of her life savings, $1300, by the pocketbook trick yesterday.

She reported to police that a Negro man about 60 came to her home, 314 Third Street Southwest, told her he just arrived in Washington from Florida and wanted to rent a room.

He then asked her, she reported, to accompany him to a bank so that he could make a deposit. En route, she said, they met another man who said he had just found a pocketbook containing $10,000 and was willing to split with her "if she would put up a sum of money to show her good faith."

The woman said she drew her money from a bank and gave it to the man who was to meet her later in the day to split with her. He never returned, she said.

Injured by Saw

Clarence E. Hight, 31, of 1214 North Capitol Street, was in critical condition at Casualty Hospital last night from injuries suffered when he was slashed by an electric hand saw.

He was working, police reported at a construction job in the 2600 block Nichols Avenue Southeast, sawing a board with rotary blade when it broke from his grasp. He was slashed on the right side and arm.

Rushed to Casualty Hospital, he was given a blood transfusion. His condition was said to be critical.

Brown Alumni Dinner

Brown University alumni will hold an informal reunion dinner this afternoon at 5:30 o'clock, at Schneider's Cafe, 427 Eleventh Street Northwest. Acting president, Capt. A. C. Westburn, will preside.

Virginian Reported Killed in Action

Pvt. Wardell Lewis of Suffolk, Va., has been killed in action in the North African area, the War Department reported yesterday. Lewis was one of 128 United States soldiers who were listed as casualties in the Asiatic, European, Middle East, North African, North American, Pacific and Southwest Pacific areas.

Canal Flood Control Plan Under Study

Park and Planning Commission Seeks Restoration as Recreation Area

Plans for permanent flood control for the old Chesapeake and Ohio Canal to restore it for a recreational area will be discussed at today's meeting of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Members of the commission spent yesterday afternoon surveying the damage done to the canal by last winter's floods. Just how to prevent recurrence of such damage, and how to get Congress to appropriate funds for whatever program is adopted will be the basis of most of today's discussion.

Funds are already available for repairing the canal eastward from Chain Bridge. Water diverted from the Potomac River through this portion of the canal services several Georgetown mills, which pay the Government $20,000 a year for this power and this contract must be maintained.

It is hoped eventually that the canal will afford a 25-mile recreational tract from the District to Seneca, Md. Its popularity last year was illustrated by a count the National Park Service made of 2500 persons taking an outing on the canal in one day.

The preliminary plans for the proposed Highway Bridge to supplant the present Fourteenth Street structure also will be discussed at today's meeting. Also a report on the Fine Arts Commission's proposal for a 110-foot building height regulation for the Zoning Commission will be presented.

Some changes in the general plan of the District Recreation Board will be suggested at today's session. Plans will be drawn up for a recreational area west of Connecticut Avenue on Courtland Street between Kalorama and Columbia Roads.

Yesterday the Park and Planning Commission moved to eliminate two military hazards in the Bolling Field area. Some trees along Shepherd Parkway will be remove as their height was declared unsafe to Army fliers. It also was decided that a permanent school to replace the temporary one at Nichols Avenue and Chesapeake Street should be farther away from the military reservation.

Norman C. Brown, Park and Planning purchasing officer, reported that condemnation awards have been approved for three projects: a bridgehead tract at the eastern end of the Sousa Bridge across the Anacostia River, which the owner had intended converting into a parking lot; two small lots on Davidson Street Southeast, as part of the Anacostia Park, and a half acre tract on Good Hope Road across from the German Orphan Asylum as part of the Fort Drive development.

D. C. Red Cross Division Has New Chairman

Mrs. George Angus Garrett has been appointed to succeed Miss Mabel T. Boardman as chairman of the District Red Cross Chapter's Volunteer Special Services, it was announced yesterday at a luncheon given by John C. Folger, chapter chairman.

MRS. GARRETT

Announcement of Mrs. Garrett's appointment followed a statement that Miss Boardman, long active with the Red Cross, had resigned the post, although agreeing to retain the position of chapter vice chairman.

Reached at her home last night, Mrs. Garrett, widely active in civic enterprises here, declared she is "proud to step into Miss Boardman's shoes, since her name is practically synonomous with that of the Red Cross." Her duties, she said, would begin "immediately."

It is "very likely," the newly appointed chairman said, that she will have to discontinue her activities with the National Red Cross Committee on Volunteer Special Services, in charge of prisoners of war packing centers. "My new job will take every bit of time I have.

Recently returned from a trip to St. Louis, Mo., where she set up the fourth packing center in the country at which food parcels for war prisoners are prepared by Red Cross volunteers, Mrs. Garrett was unable to explain her predecessor's resignation, "I do know, though, that Miss Boardman is still secretary of the National Red Cross," she said. Miss Boardman

Mrs. Garrett also is on the board of Emergency Hospital, and a member of the women's board of the National Symphony Orchestra.

Lend-Lease Shaping Postwar World Trade, Halifax Says

BY HALIFAX—British Ambassador Lord Halifax presents V-man award to W. E. Scott at Junior Board of Commerce luncheon yesterday

The "giant pooled effort" of lend-lease is shaping the world's postwar trade relations, Viscount Halifax told members of the Junior Board of Commerce yesterday at the Annapolis Hotel.

He described Great Britain's economic status during the first two years of war when goods wanted by the people were diverted for economic stability into the export stream.

"In early 1941," he said, "it was evident that we were getting near the bottom of the barrel. And then your President conceived quite a visional and, what I suppose will be, quite historical idea—lend-lease. As a result, we were able to concentrate on munitions rather than exports."

He cited the fundamental change which has resulted in trade relations, adding: "We no longer judge by purely commercial standards but by what is necessary jointly."

Noting that postwar planning is of utmost importance for the future of international economy, Lord Halifax sai dthat the democratic nations have a great responsibility in furthering the standards of not only their own people but the other peoples of the world. The dream, which followed the last war, of creating "a new heaven and a new earth" cannot be achieved by adherence to the doctrine of rigid economic nationalism, he said.

Cited as "pointers" toward the new trend in postwar order were the Atlantic Charter, mutual trade agreements between the nations, renewal of the Trade Agreements Act and plans for an international monetary scheme. He predicted tremendous expansion of export trade.

"Every true world citizen ought to apply his or her mind to the close partnership and cooperation of the big powers of the world," asserted Lord Halifax. "We can't solve all our problems with cooperation, but there are few indeed that we can solve without it."

At the luncheon, Howard Surface, jr., who led Company L of Western High School which recently won the competitive cadet drill, was awarded a war bond, in place of the saber of past years, and a commemorative medal.

Capital's First Air Scout Units Welcomed at Court of Honor

Welcoming Washington's first two air scout squadrons into existence, Col. Earle L. Johnson, of the civil air patrol and commissioner for air scouting last night told those assembled at the Boy Scout Court of Honor that "aviation is going to become the greatest industry this world has ever had because young people will make it that way."

Speaking from a stage at whose periphery gloriously colored complicated plane models constructed by Scouts were arranged, he emphasized the importance of air scouting in covering the drudgery of ground school during a boy's growing years, so that when he is old enough to take wings he may go quickly into flying.

Induction of the two local squadrons was part of ceremonies held to award honors in the Washington area council.

Eagle Scout awards, top grade of all scouting for those whose achievements and character are judged most worthy, were awarded Sidney Springer, Troop 30; Wilbur C. Tupman, Troop 37; Marcel E. Conrad, jr., Troop 93, and Elward Gwynn, Troop 241. Presentation was made by Dr. Paul Bartsch, vice president of the local council, to parents who came to the stage with electees and who in turn pinned the badges on them.

In addition, David E. Hamlin, member at large, and Emil Schnellbecher, Troop 4, already eagle scouts, received bronze palms. Ralph Turner, Troop 89, and Richard H. Rule, R. C. No. 1, could not be present, but will receive one silver and one bronze combination and two silver and one bronze combination, respectively, in recognition of their achievements.

Life awards, next highest to the eagle scout, were presented by Lieut. Col. A. T. Pagter, cub scout leader, to Clyde Cooley, Richard Gregory, Horace Lehman, Don Longfellow, Rolf Scovell, Gerry P. Thomas and Theodore C. Uhler.

Star awards went to Howard Bass, James Bennett, Robert Burch, Eugene Elder, William Foster, Paul Gardescu, Eugene Griffin, Robert Keeley, Francis King, Clyde Lingelbach, Joe Marsden, William S. Mathers, Dick Miller, Townsend Pagter, Raymond Parker, Robert Pitts, Keith Seegmiller, Walter Stewart, George Thomas, Henry Travis, Charles Tron, and David Turner. Dr. John Cole made the presentation.

In conclusion, a demonstration by sea scouts was reviewed by Lieutenant Commander Tanco, naval attache at the Colombian Embassy and first class ship ratings were awarded.

D. C. Salvage Group to Conduct Intensified Drive for Tin Cans

As the result of a decided falling off in its collection of tin cans from apartment houses in the city, the District Salvage Committee has decided to conduct a more intensified campaign to collect cans from commercial consumers.

At the same time an effort will be made to obtain complete coverage of all the apartment houses in the city in order to salvage as many of the cans from this source as possible, Horace Walker, executive secretary of the committee announced.

One reason given for the falling off in the collection of cans from apartments was that shortage of help prevented swift collection of the discarded cans.

The collection of cans here dropped in May to 47,000 pounds as compared with a high of 98,000 pounds in February.

Dental Aides Sought

Dental aides for Washington clinics are sought by the Civilian Defense Volunteer Office and may register at headquarters, 2324 F Street Northwest, until July 1, it was announced yesterday.

Experience is preferred but not mandatory. Duties will consist of answering the telephone, receiving patients, keeping files and records and sterilizing instruments. Volunteers will serve at least one day a week, Monday through Friday from 8:45 a. m. to 4:45 p. m. and Saturday from 8:45 a. m. to 12:45 p. m.

1000 Give Blood

One thousand blood donations in the past four days, from Army personnel from colonels to privates including WAACS and nurses, were received at the blood bank at Fort Myer. This is believed to have set some sort of record.

Shapiro Held for Grand Jury in GasCoupon Sales

David Shapiro, gasoline dealer of 4513 Fourteenth Street Northwest, who was cited by the local OPA on a charge of selling "T" gasoline ration coupons, yesterday pleaded not guilty before U. S. Commissioner Needham C. Turnage and was bound over to the grand jury under a bond of $600.

City to Open Pool, Shower Service Soon

Operations Start Thursday Under Recreation Unit's 3-Way Program

A three-way heat combatting program, featuring swimming pool, wading pool and street shower services, will begin Thursday under direction of the D. C. Recreation Department.

The opening will be timed with the closing of schools on Wednesday to provide summer relaxation for District youngsters, but adults are also eligible.

Scheduled to open are the Rosedale Pool, Seventeenth and Gales Streets Northeast, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, 9 a. m. to 4 p. m., for boys, and Monday, Wednesday and Friday, same hours, for girls, and 4 to 7 p. m. every day for mixed adult groups; also, the Georgetown Pool, Thirty-fourth and Volta Streets Northwest, for both boys and girls daily, 9 a. m. to 4 p. m., and thereafter for adults.

Also opening for Negroes will be the Dunbar Pool, First and N Streets Northwest, noon to 8 p. m.; Francis Pool, Twenty-fourth and N Streets Northwest, 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., and Banneker Pool, Georgia Avenue and Howard Street Northwest, 9 a. m. to noon.

The pools are free, and each will be under the supervision of three Red Cross life savers.

In McKinley, East Potomac, Takoma Park and Anacostia pools, which are under the Welfare and Recreation Association, the D. C. Recreation Department will supervise the pools and programs during the morning hours. Free swimming lessons will be given from 9 to 10 a. m., and cards for such instruction must be secured one week in advance.

Supplementing the swimming pool program, will be 12 wading pools for white children and two wading pools for colored children, at the following locations:

Palisades, Dana Street and Sherrier Place Northwest; Chevy Chase, Forty-first and Livingstone Streets; Georgetown, Thirty-fourth and Volta Streets Northwest; Park View, Warder and Otis Streets Northwest; Hamilton, Hamilton between Thirteenth and Fourteenth Streets Northwest; Happy Hollow, Eighteenth Street and Kalorama Road Northwest; New York Avenue, First Street and New York Avenue Northwest; Langdon Park, Eighteenth and Franklin Streets Northeast; Rosedale, Seventeenth and Gales Streets Northeast; Hoover, Second and N Streets Southwest; Garfield, Second and F Streets Southeast; Virginia, Ninth and Virginia Avenue Southeast; Howard, Sixth and W Streets Northwest, and Lincoln, Sixth and L Streets Southeast.

Street showers will be operated on five white routes and three Negro routes, which will include an average of five showers, 9 a. m. to 5 p. m., five days in the week. An attendant will be in charge of each.

Man to Cease Slaughtering In OPA Fight

Ralph P. Counselman, who operates a slaughter house at 433 Eleventh Street Southwest, yesterday announced that he would close his business tomorrow and remain closed until his current litigation with the OPA is settled.

Counselman was indicted in April for alleged violation of OPA price ceiling regulations.

Yesterday, through his attorney, Michael F. Keogh, he filed a demurrer to the indictment and a motion to quash it, and at the same time filed a 50-page brief attacking the constitutionality of OPA.

Counselman, in announcing that he was quitting, said that he could not continue to operate his business under OPA regulations as it was costing him a loss of $2000 a week. He has been in the slaughtering business here for 22 y ars and his family has been in the business since the Civil War.

Through his attorney, Counselman charged in the brief filed in District Court, the indictment failed to charge any offense against the United States, and attacked the regulatory powers of the OPA; that OPA regulations failed to permit an equitable profit; that the regulation which Counselman is charged with having violated had been revoked at the time of the alleged offense; that the regulations required sales be made at unfair prices; and the regulations are unconstitutional in that they would deprive Counselman of his property without due process of law.

The closing of the slaughter house will reduce those operating in the District from three to two.

"Counselman has to pay 18 to 19 cents a pound for veal on the hoof," Keogh explained. "He then slaughters it, dresses it, trims away the waste, and is allowed to sell it for 23 cents a pound.

"He feels that he cannot remain in business and lose money at this rate, so he has decided to close shop until this case is settled."

Women's Club News

By Genevieve Reynolds

While luncheon and speaker meetings practically are over for the summer, majority of the women's clubs in the District will carry on, principally in war activities. An incomplete check among the organizations' presidents — have not been able to reach all— reveal that skeleton office forces will be on tap to meet any emergencies.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

Mrs. Eugene Duffield, new president of the Voteless D. C. League of Women Voters, is one that is sticking on the job. Personally, she feels that now isn't the time to let up. Together with the league's two vice presidents, Mrs. Duffield will alternate to keep the office manned each day. She hopes to get a month off from the league's duties to can. "As for a real vacation—that is out," she declared, "there is too much gardening and canning to do."

Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, who is president of both the Washington and Twentieth Century Clubs, has no definite vacation plans. One possibility is a stay at the Marvin farm in nearby Maryland.

Bridge luncheons will end at the Washington Club this month. The large, impressive library will remain open throughout the summer, where members may drop in to read the latest books and magazines as well as the classics. Many of the members will continue their individual war projects, but once the club has completed its heavy quota of Red Cross materials the unit will disband for the summer, according to Mrs. Marvin.

Since the Twentieth Century Club has no clubhouse, activities will be disbanded until fall with the exception of the Red Cross and the International Relations Sections. These two will carry on, reports Mrs. Marvin.

Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins, president of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs, expects to go to the General Federation's Board meeting scheduled for June 28 to July 2 at Swampscott, Mass. With the lull in federation activities, Mrs. Watkins hopes to be able to entertain her friends at her home. She expects to spend much time gardening. Laughingly, she said: "I spend half my time now trying to defend Washington weather."

Seriously, she wants to take or rather retake a course in Nurse's Aid. Already she is mapping out plans for next fall. She hopes to put on a cleanliness campaign in Washington. Her object is to clean up the trash and debris that careless persons throw about the streets. Also, she wants to persuade the various clubs affiliated with the federation to organize singing groups within its folds. That isn't all. Mrs. Watkins expects to hold frequent meetings of the club presidents to discuss and work out solutions confronting them for the duration. In the meantime, the federation will hold council meetings and continue its varied war activities.

Mrs. Eugene Callaghan, retiring president of the Voteless D. C. League of Women Voters, is going back home for the first time in six years. Idaho, to see her parents, will be her first stop; then on to Oregon to join her husband, Eugene, a geologist in the Geological Survey Division of the United States Department of Interior. California is her next stop—there she will visit her sister, and later will join hes husband in Texas. Mr. Callaghan is in the field division of the Geological Survey department so doesn't stay put long. Early fall will find Mrs. Callaghan back in Washington, delving into special legislative projects. Accompanying her on her travels will be her infant son, John Curtis.

The Woman's National Democratic Club will continue full strong under Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, the president. Now in session are speech classes, war work, study groups, dinner and luncheon meetings. Strong emphasis is being placed on war and postwar activities.

Come Tuesday, the WOMEN'S CITY CLUB will hold a get-together at which Dr. Margaret Miller will be hostess. Mrs. Edward St. John, vice chairman of the Speaker's Bureau of the American Red Cross, will talk on "What the Red Cross Is Doing for Our Armed Forces at Home and Abroad" . . . Washington Chapter, NEW ROCHELLES COLLEGE ALUMNAE ASSOCIATION will hold a picnic at Pierce Mill in Rock Creek Park, Sunday, 3:30 p. m. Guest of honor will be Miss Ruth Fox, who was graduated summa cum laude and was awarded the Cardinal Hayes prize as the most outstanding senior . . . members of the NATIONAL PARK COLLEGE ALUMNAE CHAPTER in Washington will attend the morning services at All Souls' Church, Sixteenth and Harvard Streets Northwest, 11 a. m. Sunday.

Miss Hagan Speaks

"The postwar world is already here for hundreds of wounded men who will never see action again," Miss Margaret Hagan, Red Cross field director at St. Elizabeths Hospital, declared at a meeting of the District of Columbia Committee of the Red Cross Army and Navy Auxiliary held this week in the Sulgrave Club. Miss Hagan emphasized the need for the wives, daughters and sisters of returned service men to help them in their readjustment to civilian life. The sympathetic understanding necessary for such a task really requires a special course in psychiatry which the Red Cross Army and Navy Auxiliary will organize providing enough interest is shown in such a program.

Mrs. Leslie Bratton, chairman of the D. C. Committee of the Army and Navy Auxiliary, announced at the meeting that her predecessor, Mrs. Charles B. B. Bubb, had been appointed National Red Cross chairman of the Army and Navy Auxiliary, with Mrs. Elliott Bryant as her co-chairman. Mrs. Bratton pointed out that the District of Columbia was the experimental chapter for the Army and Navy Auxiliary and had proved such a tremendous success that it was being used as a working model for other Red Cross Army and Navy Auxiliary committees throughout the country.

Among the most important projects sponsored by the auxiliary, Mrs. Bratton stated, is the day nursery organized to take care of the children of servicemen. Volunteers are urgently needed for the day nursery and anyone over 16 years of age and willing to volunteer a few hours each week is asked to call Re-

Mary Haworth's Mail

After Meeting on Train, Girl and Soldier Write To Each Other for Months; Now Man Wants Her To Pay Him a Visit; Is It Proper for Her to Go?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Last December, while en route to my home by train, I met a soldier whose companionship I enjoyed very much on that trip. In parting, we promised to write. Since then, we have been corresponding. Also, we have exchanged photographs and I have received several small trinkets from him. In fact, we have become very devoted to each other as a result of our correspondence; and we find we have much in common, including our age,—which is 28.

Since we would like to see each other again, he has asked me to spend a few days in some city near his camp this summer. It would be impossible for him to travel the whole distance between his camp and my home, on a weekend leave. Could I act on his suggestion,—without giving the wrong impression and without straining the limits of propriety? I would pay my own expenses, of course; and would stay at a hotel of the best reputation. I had thought of taking a friend along with me; but I am afraid the trip would prove unduly expensive and boring to a disinterested person. I will appreciate your early advice. Sincerely, JENNY.

A Suitable Journey For Seasoned Adult

DEAR JENNY: In my opinion, any woman of the mature age of 28, with a sober respect for the proprieties and a clear understanding of their socially protective significance, who is a seasoned traveller well accustomed to fending for herself in large cities, is clearly entitled to keep a holiday rendezvous of the type mentioned here,—with no other chaperonage than her own conscience and deep self-respect. If you were a young girl, or unused to travelling about alone, or carelessly indifferent to circumspect social procedure,—or if this were a case in which the man could, if he would, cover the distance necessary to make the visit possible,—one might feel differently about the proposition.

In such circumstances, any conservative counselor would feel a sense of responsibility to argue the inadvisability of a long train journey to meet a man whom you had seen only once before;—and then in the guise of "pick-up" acquaintance. And I think a strong case could be made against the adventure. But the solid tone of your letter, which reflects a deliberative, resourceful and intelligent cast of character, certainly reassures me that you can make the trip without loss of dignity, and derive some educational profit from it,—even if it turns out to be a wild goose chase, in the sense of disclosing the man to be a great disappointment on further acquaintance; or possibly a would-be "wolf;" or results in his visibly losing romantic interest in you, before the visit is done. Even if you come back with no more positive reaction than the firm resolution never to waste time on a "pick-up" admirer again,—you will be that much ahead in the game of living. It has been said, "Anybody may make a mistake; but only a fool won't learn from experience."

Careful Preparations Will Dignify Visit

Before setting off on the trip, however, be very sure you can get reservations in a hotel of "best reputation." It is advisable to make a definite reservation well in advance, —provided hotels in middle-State areas are now doing business on that basis. And you had best do the same about train accommodations, —especially if you want to travel by pullman. You should check with your friend, to establish a feasible time for the visit, a month or so hence,—then negotiate hotel and train reservations, and finally notify him that you will be in, say, Louisville, on July 28 for a week's stay, putting up at the So-and-So Hotel. In other letters prior to your visit, you could then discuss with him how to "take in the town," in the time you will have on your hands while he is on duty at camp; and, also, the list of activities he will expect you to share with him. Such information will be useful in assembling a suitable wardrobe for the trip. M. H.

Wants School Guidance For Teen-Age Daughter

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Will you be so good as to give me the name of some person or organization having information and helpful counsel on boarding schools for youngsters of high school age? I have a daughter aged 14. We are alone in the world, I being a widow; and I am employed, and therefore away from home 11 hours every day, except Sundays.

My daughter is too much alone; and this year she did poor work in school. I think she needs more supervision;—someone to be answerable to. I have thought of boarding school as the possible solution; but I am not yet definitely committed to the idea, and would like to discuss it with well-informed persons, before reaching a decision. Sincerely yours, R. B. W.

Conscientious Source Of Counsel Available

DEAR R. B. W.: The School Guidance Center, at 1108 Sixteenth Street Northwest, telephone NAtional 1818, should be able to furnish the information you want. In addition, it maintains a Camp Information Service,—and if my impression is correct, is very conscientious in its approach to the responsibility of helping parents place their children in the most favorable school (or camp) environment available, within the parents' means. Miss Mildred Elliott is in charge of the office, and I advise you to discuss your tentative purpose with her. M. H.

"How on earth will we ever get to the Swanks' party?"

"I suppose we'll have to go on the street car."

"But it's always so embarrassing—in evening dress."

"We might take the bus. It would be a little more—er—well, you know what I mean."

"I really think it would be all right to take a taxi!"

"Oh, I wouldn't dare! That would be pleasure riding."

"Why would it? Dull as her parties are!"

"I hadn't thought of that. Of course I'm not going for pleasure anyway. It's just because I think I ought to."

"Exactly! It's really duty for both of us."

"Yes, and then I feel definitely that at a time like this our social conventions should be maintained."

"Exactly! What else will the boys have to come home to?"

"And besides, people ought to get together to keep up morale."

"That's it! Why, it's really their patriotic duty."

"Well, I think under the circumstances we could really call this a party with a purpose."

"Exactly! That's why I say we should at least take a taxi."

"We-ll of course—if we're going to take a taxi—and if it's a matter of duty . . . and . . . of morale . . . well I don't see why we shouldn't—well—er—go in one of our own cars."

"That's just what I was thinking."

II

"Did you spend your shoe coupon?"

"Did I! I stood in line two hours, and then I had to take a pair of red sandals with nailheads."

"I got a wonderful alligator pump—of course it's a size narrower than I wear, but I figure my foot will contract as soon as the weather gets cooler."

"I'll have to get something to wear. I haven't a thing on earth that goes with my sandals—but at least I'm glad I have 'em. I doubt if we can get red sandals with nailheads next summer.

"That's the way I felt about the alligator pumps, and then I thought if I took that reducing course, they'd just about fit my foot next spring."

"I spent Jim's coupon, too, for some scuffles. I didn't really need them, but I felt it was my duty not to let the coupon go to waste."

"That's the way with me. I spent Tom's and Mother's coupons—because I thought I ought to. Of course I didn't get a thing I wanted, but the way I look at it, you're lucky to have any kind of shoes."

"I'll say so. Why, by this time next year everybody may be wearing plastics!"

"Imagine that! I must remember to tell Tom that when he sees the bill."

III

"Let's get another of those little marinated shrimps."

"No, I don't dare. You know I've had to go up to size 18 in my dresses."

"I can't wear any of last summer's clothes, but just the same I think we'd better eat all we can while we have it."

"Maybe you're right. I believe I'll take another sandwich."

"Let's get some more ice cream. You know they may ration milk."

"All right—only—well, I'm a little worried about the way I'm thickening at the waist."

"Don't worry. Look at my hips. And my girdle's simply killing me. But we'll lose it fast enough when the next rationing comes."

"Well, I've never eaten so many potatoes in my life as I have in the last few weeks, but I felt as if it was my duty to eat them every time I got a chance."

"That's the way I've been about meat . . . and butter . . . and sugar and —well, everything I could lay my hands on. Let's have another piece of cake."

"No, really I shouldn't! I won't sleep a wink tonight."

"Say, you'll be sorry some day if you don't!"

"Maybe you're right. I suppose even if I do lose my figure . . . and get indigestion . . . it's really my duty . . . at a time like this . . ."

Take Special Care Of Refrigerator In Hot Weather

The warmer the weather, the more essential it is to take care of the refrigerator. Spilled foods should be wiped up immediately with a cloth moistened with soapy water. Every time the refrigerator is defrosted it should be given an all-out washing. Everything in the box, including the shelves, should be taken out and washed in warm soapy water, rinsed, dried, and replaced when cooled. In the regulation ice-box, the ice compartment usually needs weekly cleaning to prevent formation of slime and clogging of the drain pipe.

While the inside of the refrigerator is the most important part as far as food is concerned, the outside should not be neglected. Finger marks.

A man once wanted his bride to be "a cook in the kitchen," "a lady in the drawing room" and "a flirt in the boudoir." Marriage proved her "a flirt in the drawing room," "a cook in the boudoir" and "a lady in the kitchen" . . . which was tough luck. Does your husband expect you to be a combination Lillith, Cornelia and Oscar of the Waldorf? Well, not for nothing did nature make us three-faced.

Clothes cannot do the whole job but they certainly help. The actress doesn't live who would deny the psychological advantage of appropriate costume . . . and all good wives are good actresses, whether they admit it or not. We've tackled the apron in other columns, and the boudoir is your department. What we did find, however, is the perfect answer for a lady in the drawing room.

It's a suave, black sheath, lissome of line and disarmingly simple. Created to make your face the center of interest, and at the same time, giving an eloquent but not obvious flattery to your form. The satin belt is the only trimming. This is caught into a bow by a cut steel buckle, which cancels out the need for other jewelry. About $35.

Excellent for confounding husbands after a long day of putting scrap, ambulances and children in their proper places. It's wise to remember that while he undoubtedly admires your voluntary efforts, the little woman in uniform is just no fun to come home to . . . or go places with. # Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Parents are annoyed when their children are in the period of development during which they insist upon seemingly useless repetition of the same things.

When Daddy comes home at night and hangs his hat in the hall closet, he must from then on hang it there, whether or no. The hat-hanging has become a rigmarole which must be repeated nightly.

Let a visitor come in and put her pocketbook at a certain angle on a certain table and the child is distressed if subsequently she puts it elsewhere. The table and the pocketbook make a pleasing picture to the child and he wants it repeated.

This period, usually from about 2½ to 3 or more, has a name. It is called the "ritualistic" period because of the child's insistence that once begun every act must be dignified by constant repetition. Everything has a form and it is the form that is satisfying. It influences the order in which clothes are put on, the ceremony of going to bed or eating a meal, even to the same foods appearing on the plate in the same places.

While the child may be completely destructive to the order of his own room or own playthings, the possessions of others come under this compulsion to order and regularity, often, as said before, to the extreme annoyance of the parent.

The knowledge that ceremonies carried out in the self-same manner obtain the wholehearted cooperation of the child and are enormously pleasing to him, should be made use of by the parent to get necessary things done.

It is easy enough for mother to notice the order in which she puts on the child's clothes and repeat that order daily. She may enhance the satisfactions of going to the table or going to the toilet or stepping into bed, by rehearsing the individual acts which step by step lead to table or toilet or bed, and thus carry the child along in their pattern.

"Now we step up the first step, then we sit on the bed, then we take off one shoe, then we take off the other," and on and on, until the bemused child is hugging his Teddy Bear and is being covered for the night.

When the child demands events transpire in fixed fashion and cries lustily because yesterday he carried in the paper and today Mommy brought it in, have patience, work with and not against it.

Our leaflet, "Care During the Summer," suggest dangers and precautions necessary during this season. It may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Women in Uniform Set Fashion for Trim Figures

Donna Woods, radio singing star, suggests an exercise that tones the abdominal and hip muscles. As you do the exercise demonstrated, swing the arms up, around, back and down in front. This improves the three most important measurements—bust, hips, waist

All it takes to start any fashion is enough women. And now we have so many women in the armed forces looking fit and trim that the softies seem as out of date as the Gay Nineties belles who didn't dare budge without their smelling salts.

There is no denying that one thing that makes our feminine army look so spruce is the excellent carriage demanded by the military. But the main thing is the daily exercise session—and it is a real workout. The same never-skip-it routine on a less strenuous scale would do as much for any woman with the gumption to follow it.

To tone and firm the arm, shoulder and pectoral muscles spread fanwise across the chest, stand erect, with upper arms in line with shoulders in front, forearms straight up in air, and hands doubled lightly across each other. Give a vigorous yank of the shoulders and pull arms backward, keeping them at about the same level. Return to starting position and repeat 10 times. That is only a sample exercise. Any movements in which the arms are held up and the shoulder muscles put to work is beneficial in this portion of the figure.

To stretch inches off the waist and flatten the stomach, lie on back on the floor with knees flexed and feet on floor, arms straight out at sides in line with shoulders. Pull up and in with the abdominal muscles and press small of back down against floor. Hold it, and, keeping knees together, twist at waist to rest left thigh on floor, with knees pointed down hard. Come back to position, flatten back against floor, and twist to right side. Continue for 20 counts.

You can stay on the floor and take a hip slimmer that also strengthens the abdominal muscles. This time, have arms straight out at sides on floor, shoulder level, legs straight down. Swing the right leg straight up from hip, without bending knee, over and across to touch toes to left fingers. Down, and swing the left leg up. As you bring the leg up, make a conscious effort to force the small of the back down flat against the floor. Repeat the exercise for 20 counts in all.

Keeping Cool in Capital Is Problem for Women, Too

Well Known Washington Women Offer Their Recipes for Dealing With the Heat

By Patricia Grady

With clothing emancipation for men during the torrid Washington summer being ballyhooed by sensible and courageous citizens on all sides, it would seem that a little attention should be given to the feminine aspect of this question.

The problem that faces Capital womankind during these tropical days is slightly different from that of be-collared, be-coated, be-necktied men, as Mrs. Harold G. Bowen, wife of Rear Admiral Bowen, so neatly pointed out in a how-to-keep-cool poll conducted by this reporter.

"The men have a lot to open up and take off," she observed, "but I think we women have taken off about as much as we can. I just don't see that much more can be done along the de-clothing line."

Well, then, what would she suggest to ward off the heat doldrums? Attractive, snapping, blue-eyed Mrs. Bowen has her own keep-cool prescription. "Exercise is the only thing for me," she admitted. "I take as brisk a walk as I can and then come home and take a shower. It works wonders. Then, too, if you keep busy you don't have too much time to think about the weather. The psychological is important. A placid temperament helps keep your personal thermometer down."

Mrs. Daniel W. Bell, wife of the Undersecretary of the Treasury, faces the problem with great frankness. "I don't have a prescription," she answered resignedly. "In fact I'm not keeping cool; I'm so hot I could die. The only thing I know to do is to wear light cotton dresses, eat lightly and do as little as possible.

"Also," she continued, "I believe in using your energy where it will do the most good—not running around unnecessarily. And if you want to talk about the heat—go ahead. That's one way to get it out of your system."

Washington just isn't sensible about its heat, according to Mrs. Charles O. Andrews, wife of the Senator from Florida. In her home State when the days get really hot, they "move early and late, stay in in the middle of the day." Dark cotton clothes are Mrs. Andrews' usual costume here, although in Florida she wears white almost exclusively.

"There is no way to keep cool on a bus," she said with the complete authority of a Chevy Chase dweller. "Of course I don't use the car at all now, and as far as I know there is no way to get away from the heat in a crowded bus. But you can try to get done the things that take the most exertion during the early morning hours."

Mrs. Andrews is not going to try to combat the sizzling months here. She and her husband stuck it out last summer but now they are planning to leave for Lake Conway, near their home in Orlando, Fla., the first of next month. They'll camp several weeks, then, en route back to the Capital, will visit with friends in Highland, N. C. They expect to return about September 1.

New Minister Bonnet Urges Unity for Peace

By Max Hill
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, June 17.—Henri Bonnet, Minister of Information in the newly formed French Committee of National Liberation, believes that "nations united in war must remain united in peace to solve the complex problems facing a world-wide reorganization once the actual fighting is over."

Both in an interview in New York and in an article he wrote for the first issue of Mondre Libre, the Montreal-published French edition of Free World, an international magazine which has as its purpose a global unity of all races, M. Bonnet stressed the necessity of this postwar cooperation.

In the article he said: "Military problems enjoy priority today, but they must not make us forget the numerous and daily complex problems the United Nations must solve in the diverse political fields nor the immense task facing a liberated Europe and Asia" which have been "ruined, devastated and flattened by a savage enemy."

Prior to taking over his new duties with the French liberation committee, M. Bonnet was doing research work for a postwar committee in Chicago. He also was active in the France Forever Committee, which is associated with the Fighting French delegation in the United States. Before coming to the United States he was connected with the League of Nations.

In the New York interview, M. Bonnet said the important thing today was that the French were united.

"Today," he said, "the question as to whether one is a Giraudist or a De Gaullist is not important. We have been appointed as a unit for France, and we will serve as such. I believe unity has been achieved in a completely satisfactory way."

M. Bonnet, who is 55 years old and tall and tanned, now is en route to Algiers. He has been in the United States since 1940. One of his key motives in his new job, he said, will be to do "all I can toward drawing still closer, if possible, the bonds between France and the United States."

He was rather vague in discussing possible representation in post-war planning groups of the conquered nations, and said he had not given much thought to the problem.

In the article he went into the problems which will come with peace rather fully, saying:

Nations united in war must remain united in peace . . . Not only will the Four Freedoms have to be respected above every other consideration, but our duty shall also be to adapt the great doctrines of liberty to the necessity of the industrial era and to solve social problems.

A new world-wide movement has been organized, he wrote, and it is made up of "all who now want to build modern societies in freedom and dignity.

"Members of that new movement must remain united and give to governments and regimes the strength to succeed where their predecessors failed."

After the democracies have won the war he believes "they must be able this time to reap all the fruits of victory, and this is the main reason why everyone must be prepared for peace just as much as we had to be ready to fight.

"Ever more conscious of her historical destiny.

United Nations Club Plans Gala Birthday Celebration

Dumbarton Oaks to Be Scene of Reception and Dance on Sunday

In a celebration marking its first anniversary the United Nations Club will gather Sunday at Dumbarton Oaks, the estate donated by Robert Woods Bliss to Harvard University and made available especially for the occasion by the university.

Following the flag-raising, during which a bugler from Fort Myer will render a salute, and the invocation by a Navy chaplain, Mr. Bliss will escort the guests on a tour of the gardens. In the evening there will be a buffet supper and dancing on the terrace.

The United States flag, and the "flag of the Four Freedoms" will be raised with a bugler from Fort Myer rendering a salute. The invocation will be offered by a Navy chaplain, following which officers of the club will welcome the guests. Robert Woods Bliss, who donated Dumbarton Oaks to Harvard University, will conduct the guests on a tour of the gardens, and the occasion will be topped off with a buffet supper and dancing on the terrace.

In its short, but tremendously effective, life, the United Nations Club has an impressive list of accomplishments to its credit toward increasing understanding among nationalities. Originated by Miss Meredith Howard, Miss Suzanne Rosenberg, Mrs. Frank R. Kent, jr., and Mrs. Robert Pell, the organization began its work in the spring of 1942 with a series of tea dances. All last summer the club held forth at Dumbarton Oaks each Sunday and in the fall its dances were resumed and its activities increased by Saturday luncheons at Hotel 2400 which were broadcast coast-to-coast. Club activities were further augmented during the winter months with a "foreign film feature" series conducted by Mrs. Harold J. Coolidge, and regular weekly "play your own game" nights handled by Mrs. Edward Treglown.

From the initial small gathering, the membership has soared to approximately 800, with all the Ambassadors and Ministers of the United Nations as honorary members, taking a keen interest in the club's growth. Included among the members are representatives of even the smallest of the United Nations, such as Iraq, Luxembourg, Haiti and Costa Rica.

The celebration Sunday will also mark the opening of a drive to raise funds to acquire and equip a permanent clubhouse, replacing the Newspaper Women's Club house at 1604 Twentieth Street which has been leased by the United Nations Club. In its own home the club hopes to expand even further its efforts to spread knowledge of all nationalities.

Paul Holmes Takes Bride In Church Rites

The Congress Heights Methodist Church was the scene of the wedding last evening of Miss Elizabeth McConahey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul L. McConahey, and Paul E. Holmes. The Rev. George L. Conner officiated at the 8 o'clock ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a circular-train gown of white satin and organza trimmed in seed pearls. Her finger-tip veil fell from a seed-pearl coronet and she carried a bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley.

The honor attendant, Miss Mary G. Pemberton, was dressed in aquamarine organza and carried a bouquet of yellow roses. The bridesmaids, Miss Helen McDaniel, Miss Iona Meir, Mrs. Ruth Bray and Miss Dorothy Burbuch, were dressed in identically styled gowns. Two wore yellow organza and carried ivory-tinted roses and two were in peach organza, carrying Talisman roses.

Philip H. Lightfoot, jr., served as best man and the ushers were Horace S. Cammack, U. William Locraft, Roland C. Hartman and Paul F. Traynham 2d.

Following the ceremony a reception was held on the lawn of the home of the bride's parents. After a wedding trip to New England, the couple will make their home at 6108 First Place.

The bride was graduated from Strayers College, and her husband is a graduate of the University of Maryland.

Tailor-Made Pies Achieved by Use Of Graham Crackers

Let your refrigerator help keep you cool this summer. I don't mean you should open the door and climb in. But do prepare all the food possible in the cool of the morning, and store in the refrigerator until serving time.

This way of cooking will not only make you less busy at the dinner hour but will also be a way of utilizing many left-over bits of foods. For there is many a dish to be made whose principal ingredients can be stretched considerably with that sturdy yet elastic food—gelatin. Fruits can be made into gelatin desserts, left-over meat, chicken and fish can be made into flavorsome molds, with the use of gelatin.

You can also cook cool by using crackers and wafers in place of dough for many desserts. Here's a way to save shortening. We have all used graham crackers for years combined with melted butter to make delicious pie shells. But now with butter and other fats on the rationed list we must consider how we can get along on the allotted amount. But we can still further streamline graham cracker pie crust into a novel, wartime version requiring less time and effort.

It is a wartime version because it requires no shortening. This process also requires less time and effort than when melted shortening is added to the graham cracker crumbs.

This is the way you achieve the graham cracker crust. Lightly grease a pie plate (the glass ones can be used and then taken to the table for serving) and then place the crackers in the bottom. Fill in the openings between and around the edges with crumbs. Cut crackers in half to line the top edge of the pie plate. Then pour the filling, which has been slightly cooled, into the shell and place in the refrigerator until serving time.

Don't be skeptical as to whether the back of the crust will stand up when individual pieces are cut. Don't worry; it does. Just try it for yourself. Many delicious fillings can be made to fill the shell, such as apple chiffon, rhubarb, lemon, strawberry chiffon, caramel and cream. Here are the recipes for chocolate, lemon, caramel and cream fillings:

CHOCOLATE FILLING.

Mix dry ingredients—3 tablespoons cornstarch, 5 tablespoons sugar and 1 square chocolate or 4 tablespoons cocoa with a little of 2 cupfuls milk. Scald the remainder of the 2 cups of milk and add the cornstarch mixture. Put into double boiler and stir while it cooks and thickens. When smooth and somewhat thick, cover and cook for 10 minutes. Stir occasionally. Remove from heat and add ½ teaspoon vanilla. Pour into graham-cracker crust and chill. Top with uncooked meringue.

UNCOOKED MERINGUE

Even a meringue can be made and placed in the refrigerator to be spooned on at serving time. This type of meringue is an uncooked one. It is as simple to make as the pie shell. Whip the whites of 2 eggs to which has been added a dash of salt. Pour boiling water over the whipped whites. Let the egg whites rise to the top. Make sure that all of the whites are exposed to the boiling water. Skim off the meringue, put in a collander to drain. When dripping has stopped, pile in a bowl and place in refrigerator. This will keep indefinitely. For sweetening, crush 1 or 2 graham crackers finely and fold into the meringue. Other flavoring will not be necessary. This meringue is also fine to use to top custards and puddings.

CARAMEL FILLING

Caramelize 5 tablespoons sugar by heating over direct fire in top part of double boiler until it becomes a golden brown syrup. Remove from fire and add 1¾ cups milk. Place over lower part of double boiler. Mix 3 tablespoons corn starch and a pinch of salt with ¼ cup milk to make a smooth paste. Pour hot milk into paste and stir thoroughly. Pour back into double boiler and heat until it begins to thicken, stirring constantly. After it thickens smoothly, cover and cook for 10 minutes. Stir occasionally. Remove from fire and add 1 teaspoon butter and ½ teaspoon vanilla or a few drops of mapleine. Pour into crust and chill. Top with uncooked meringue.

LEMON FILLING

Mix ¾ cup sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, 3 tablespoons corn starch and 2 tablespoons flour. Slowly add 1½ cups boiling water and cook until thick, stirring constantly. Beat 2 egg yolks with ¼ cup sugar until thick. Add small amount of hot mixture and stir into remaining mixture. Cook three minutes. Add 1-3 cup lemon juice and 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind. Pour into crust. Top with uncooked meringue.

CREAM FILLING

Mix 4½ tablespoons flour, ½ cup sugar and ⅛ teaspoon salt. Add the yolks of 2 eggs. Then add 2 cups milk. Cook in double boiler until thick. Place in graham cracker crust and cool. Top with uncooked meringue.

Point-Free Recipe Uses Rich Cracker Filling in Onions

Your ration book can be blissfully ignored in using the following recipe for a delicious main dish for dinner. The use of crackers provides the necessary energy units in which the other main ingredients, fresh mushrooms and onions, though timely and toothsome, are lacking.

These stuffed onions can be prepared for baking well in advance, if necessary. They're easy enough for any beginner to make—although the result always seems like a skilled chef's concoction.

STUFFED ONIONS 1943

Parboil for 10 minutes, 6 large onions from which skins have been removed. Turn upside down to cool and scoop out centers.

Fill the cavities with a mixture of the onion centers, chopped fine, and seasoned with salt and pepper, 2/3 cup cracker crumbs, 2 tablespoons chopped parsley and 4 tablespoons chopped mushrooms, previously sauted. Add 3 tablespoons cream to moisten.

Any left-over meat, chopped up, may be added, in which case gravy may be substituted for the cream.

If you can spare a speck of butter, cover the tops with additional cracker crumbs and dab on the butter, or margarine. Bake in moderate oven 10 minutes. Serves 6.

Many foods have taken on war-time twists. This pie shell is such a creation. It was made from graham crackers straight from the box—no additional flourishes. Not only is this the easy way to a delicious pie crust but it saves red points too, for no melted butter is used in preparing it. The meringue topping the pie is also uncooked.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Normal fatigue is good. It is actually a pleasure to be physically tired at the end of a satisfying day's work. To make you feel like new all you need is a good night's sleep.

But in such tense times the tendency is to keep going in high gear. It is hard to let down, to let your motor idle while you refuel your energy. So it may be necessary for you to learn to relax.

If so, you will find any number of pointers to help you untangle the threads of taut living in a new book by Dr. Josephine Rathbone, of Teachers' College, Columbia University, which is called "Relaxation." I can tell you that Dr. Rathbone preaches nothing she herself does not practice. She was my instructor in corrective exercise and I have seen her keep calm and collected in the midst of bedlam. I have seen her lie down and take a nap at the end of a hectic day just as easily as she writes about it. Since she gets a prodigious amount of work done, it is worth while to look into her methods.

To hit the top curve of your energy when you need to do it, there must be periods when you are not striving to hit it. That means you must lead a balanced life. Now, I am always telling you about the balanced diet, but the right food is not enough. If you lead a harried, hectic existence, you tear yourself down faster than you can build yourself up—no matter how good your nutrition is. To strike a balance in living you must have satisfying work, recreation, affection and religion.

You may have to make only minor changes. Let's start with work. It is Miss Rathbone's conviction that while work is very important, overwork is not the virtue we Americans like to think it. Work should be a means to better living, not an end, and the better living need not be luxurious.

When you play, don't play in competition with someone with the idea of winning. That is not what you are after. You "play" to lose the edge from your striving to win in your work. Play itself is the object.

To keep your perspective you must not only have emotional (and that includes the ability to laugh, for laughter is a great tension breaker), and spiritual resources within yourself, and to be able to get away by yourself some of the time, but you must be in good shape physically. To keep that way, Miss Rathbone advocates exercise to improve the circulation, relax tense muscles and keep you flexible.

About Canned Milk

More About Condensed Milk—When buying canned milk, here is the rule to follow in determining the number of ration points you must pay. Any number of small sized cans whose total weight is one pound or less may be bought for a single point. Though one six-ounce can costs one point, two six-ounce cans also cost one point. However, if a can weighs more than eight ounces, its cost is one point regardless of the number of cans bought. Three nine-ounce cans would cost three points even though the total weight would be less than two pounds.

MICKEY FINN — A score Is Settled — By Lank Leonard

LISTEN, HOTFOOT— WE'VE GOT TO GET ABOARD! C'MON! IT'S GETTIN' LATE!
I PROMISED THIS GUY SOMETHIN' AND HE'S GOTTA GET IT!

I CAN HEAR MY MOTHER SAYIN' IT NOW— ALWAYS PAY YOUR DEBTS!

MR. AND MRS. — The Science of Deduction — By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoover

DID YOU SEND MY SUIT TO THE TAILOR, LIKE I ASKED YOU?
I DID— FIRST TAKING A LOT OF JUNK FROM THE POCKETS
WASN'T MUCH IN 'EM THAT I REMEMBER
WELL, THERE CERTAINLY WAS SOMETHING YOU FORGET— YOU WHO HATE CANDY SO
HUH? WHAT ARE YOU TALKING ABOUT?
I FOUND SIX OR EIGHT LITTLE PAPER CUPS THAT ONCE HELD BONBONS
ANY LAW AGAINST THAT?
OH, NO. YOU JUST HELPED YOURSELF FROM MY BOX OF CANDY AND TOOK THE CUPS OUT TOO, SO I WOULDN'T KNOW YOUD BEEN THERE

DIXIE DUGAN — Hemmed In! — By J. P. McEvoy and H. J. Striebel

YOU SEE, MY DEAR CHILDREN, THIS IS THE WAY OUR FOREFATHERS STARTED FIGHTING FOR EXISTENCE— (PUFF-PUFF)

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Pig Boat Strategy — By Frank Martinek

IT'S GETTING DARK AND COLD! LET US GO INSIDE THE HOUSE, COMMANDER, WHERE IT WILL BE MORE COMFORTABLE!
THAT'S A GOOD IDEA!
TODAY THE SEA IS COMMANDED BY SCIENCE! TECHNICAL SKILL IS THE ANSWER TO OUR SEA POWER....TODAY'S SUBMARINE IS A FAR CRY FROM THE CUMBERSOME PIG BOAT OF WORLD WAR 1.. WITHOUT REFUELING LONG RANGE SUBMARINES HAVE A CRUISING RANGE OF SIXTEEN THOUSAND MILES.
THE DIVING TECHNIQUE IS BETTER.... SHUTTING HATCHES.... SWITCHING FROM SURFACE DIESEL ENGINES TO ELECTRIC MOTORS.... FLOODING BALLAST TANKS.... TAKES APPROXIMATELY ONE MINUTE!
YES, AND THEY HAVE SECRET UNDERWATER COMMUNICATION SYSTEMS AND CAN HUNT IN WOLF PACKS EXACTLY! SUBMARINES BELOW THE OCEAN SURFACE DO NOT SEE, BUT HAVE EARS THROUGH SENSITIVE MICROPHONES THAT PICK UP SHIP PROPELLERS MILES AWAY.... NOW MY PLAN IS THIS....

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — By Saunders and Woggon

AT THE FALCONVILLE POLICE STATION

DONALD DUCK — Undivided Attention! — By Walt Disney

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

IF THAT JEWEL THIEF, DOC STARR, BANDAGED MY BURNS, HIS PRINTS WILL BE ON THIS KIT!
HE LEFT PLENTY OF PRINTS IN TAM'S CABIN, KING.
HE GUARDED US WHILE MERRY WENT TO YOUR HEADQUARTERS AFTER THE DIAMOND WE MAILED TO YOU!
I FIGURED THAT WAS WHY SHE MASQUERADED AS MY BRIDE! BUT I'LL TELL YOU THAT PHONY STORY LATER--
